U.S. Suspends Mexico Silver Buying After Seizure of Oil

Step Announced on Eve of Hull Parley With Losing Firms.

Decision to Take Effect on April 1

Cardenas Urges Nation to Be Calm as Peso Faces Crisis.

Deferment "until further notice" of the United States' monthly purchases of silver from Mexico, regarded as a vital factor in stabilizing that country's monetary system, was announced last night by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr.

This statement came some hours after President Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico had issued a manifesto in Mexico City that "the Government of the United States has announced that purchases of a portion of silver production which it has been making from Mexico will be canceled effective April first."

Hull Sees Oil Men Today.

Neither Morgenthau's statement nor that of President Cardenas, as reported by the Associated Press, mentioned the expropriation on March 18 by Mexico of the $400,000,000 oil industry operated by 17 British and American companies. The fate of the Cardenas government was believed to rest on an easing of the difficult economic situation resulting from the expropriation.

Observers in Washington, however, regarded it as highly significant that the Treasury's action came as a prelude to a conference today with Secretary of State Cordell Hull, of representatives of four American oil firms whose properties in Mexico were seized. The companies are the Huasteca Petroleum Co., the Standard Oil Co. of California, the Mexican Sinclair Petroleum Corporation and the Penn Mex Fuel Co.

Morgenthau Brief.

As a basis for diplomatic action the oil companies had already complained to the State Department against a "manifest denial of justice."

President Roosevelt who, from his house at Warm Springs, Ga., had kept in close touch by telephone throughout yesterday with the

London's Market May Halt Buying Of Mexican Silver

London, March 27 (U.P.).—The first impression here today of the news from Mexico City was that it will be a bombshell in the London bullion market tomorrow, probably forcing immediate suspension of forward dealings in silver.

The sole form in which Mexico can sell silver in the world markets is for delivery two months hence. The only buyers of silver that distance ahead are Indian middlemen, who scarcely have sufficient resources to lift Mexico's monthly output of silver even if they knew what price to offer.

The effect of this move on the spot price of silver Monday seemingly is incalculable. The only possible way the price can be fixed is for bullion workers to do again what they did during the crisis of 1935, namely, to "ration" sellers and fix such a price as will "marry" all buying orders to small segments of selling orders.

50,000 Wires Urge Defeat of Reorganization

4,000 Messages Arriving an Hour; 95 Pct. Are for Recommittal.

Confidence of Administration supporters that the President's reorganization bill will be passed today was shaken last night when telegraph offices were inundated by the second largest flood of telegrams in the history of national legislation, 95 per cent of which, it was estimated, asked Senators to oppose the bill.

Superintendent B. R. Alen, of the Western Union, said between 40,000 and 50,000 telegrams regarding the bill were handled yesterday. He said he believed that, including those which the companies expected to handle today, the total will be exceeded only by the volume of messages opposing United States' entry into the World Court in 1935.

Coughlin Blamed Again.

That proposal was defeated and there was no denying that last night New Deal followers were fearful lest the reorganization bill meet a like fate. Many of yesterday's telegrams were prompted, the United Press reported, by an appeal by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest.

Father Coughlin, in a message broadcast from Detroit, charged the bill "sets up a financial dictatorship in the person of the President." He urged his listeners to telegraph to their Senators to oppose its passage.

In a last-minute drive to win public support, Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, author of the measure, and Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, a member of the Senate Lobby Committee, delivered Nation-wide radio addresses in the bill's defense.

A bipartisan opposition bloc which defeated Mr. Roosevelt's court reorganization bill last year, claimed 44 votes for recommittal of the measure when it comes to a vote at 3 p. m. today.

49 Votes Necessary.

In order to carry, the motion to recommit must have 49 votes, unless a number of Senators fail to vote because of absence.

If the recommittal motion, introduced last Thursday by Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, fails, the Senate will vote on the bill itself at 5 p. m.

In an address over a National Broadcasting Co. network Byrnes pointed out that "streamlining" of the Executive Department had been sought in the past by Presidents Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, Warren Harding, Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover.

Urges Pressure Wires.

He called upon his listeners to wire their Senators, urging them to vote for the bill which would give Mr. Roosevelt two years in which to consolidate, revamp and transfer Executive agencies in 11 Cabinet departments.

"I hope that those who listen to me will wire their Senators expressing disapproval of the effort to play petty party politics in this matter and urge them to vote for this measure which has no purpose other than to promote economy and efficiency in Government," he said.

182,900 Set New High at Cherry Fete

(Pictures on Pages 3 and 8.)

The Capital's biggest spring industry—sightseeing—took a leap forward yesterday as thousands of visitors rushed into town and Washingtonians joined the throng at the Tidal Basin to view the cherry blossoms.

A total of 182,900 persons visited the blossom territory yesterday, according to park police—making it the "biggest Sunday in cherry tree history."

Between 9:30 a. m. and 7 p. m., according to park figures, a total of 26,975 automobiles, carrying an average of four persons each, crossed Inlet Bridge into the basin area. This tops the number of automobiles of last year's first Sunday by 593.

75,000 on Foot.

It was in the number of pedestrians, however, that the increase was greatest. A careful count by police indicated that 75,000 persons were on foot in the cherry blossom territory. Last year pedestrians numbered but 25,000.

Meanwhile, the year's record throng, 60,000 persons, jammed the Zoo.

A constant breeze showered white petals on tourist and hometowner alike and brought delighted smiles to the faces of those who had followed advice of the park police to see the blooms on foot.

Walking appeared to be much more popular than riding, although the 60 policemen detailed to cherry blossom duty found heavy traffic problems to keep them busy. Chasing the spring hats of pretty girls was not the least of their worries, if they were stationed at windswept corners.

Pictures the Rage.

As groups surged to and fro on cherry blossom lane, picture-taking reached boom proportions. Rare was the couple, individual, or family unit without benefit of camera. Perching a baby in the fork of a cherry tree and photographing him before he quit smiling was one of the favorite photographic tricks. Another was snapping him while a fond relative held down a flowering limb for a close-up background.

Dogs with owners also made good subjects, as did men with pipes

38 Dynamite Way From Penal Mine; 17 Are Recaptured

By the Associated Press.

Petros, Tenn., March 27.—Warden Scott Swafford said 38 prisoners dynamited their way out of a coal mine at the Brushy Mountain prison today and that 17 were recaptured.

Swafford said the break was discovered shortly after dawn, when only about 50 of 85 miners who had been working in the No. 4 mine of the prison came to the surface.

"The men were working about a mile and a half back in the mountain and I would judge they had to dig and blast their way through about 30 feet of earth to escape," Swafford declared.

Bandits Torture Millionaire, Get $100,000 Gems

4 Burn Couturier's Feet Till He Discloses Ring Hidden in Glove.

(Picture on Page 3.)

By the Associated Press.

Woodsburgh, N. Y., March 27.—Charles Milgrim, millionaire Manhattan couturier, was tortured today by four bandits who invaded his Long Island home, terrorized and bound his servants and family, and stole $100,000 worth of jewelry.

The robbers burned Milgrim's feet with cigarettes to force him to tell where valuables were hidden.

John Waller, colored butler-cook, was preparing breakfast when the bandits, with drawn guns, overpowered him in the kitchen. One of the men demanded: "Where's Sally Milgrim's room?"

Waller and the Milgrims were bound with neckties. The bandits went to the children's room, trussed up Franklin, 12, and Paul, 9, and carried them to their parents' room.

Afterward they surprised the maid, Alwyne Gorgus, as she was doing her setting-up exercises. Scantily dressed, she, too, was tied up.

With the whole household assembled, the robber leader demanded: "Where's that ring?" He referred to an 18-carat marquis diamond mounted among smaller diamonds and set in platinum. Milgrim later told police it was worth $50,000.

No one answered. Milgrim was jerked out into the hall. The robbers struck him—still he refused to talk. Then they used their lighted cigarettes. That broke Milgrim. He disclosed the ring was hidden in one of Mrs. Milgrim's gloves.

The robbers took the marquis, a $20,000 diamond ring from Milgrim's finger, two platinum bracelets set with diamonds and emeralds valued at $7,500 each, a platinum brooch set with 14 diamonds and other gems.

French Peace Move.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 27.—The national peace council representing French peace societies today suggested that France free herself of military obligations to Czechoslovakia in case of a German attack.

The council is composed of delegates from the peace groups and its members include Leon Jouhaux, who has 5,000,000 followers in the powerful General Federation of Labor. Members of the People's Front also belong, as does Victor Basch, president of the People's Assembly, governing body of the People's Front.

A statement issued by the council declared that if France fulfilled her Czech treaty she would be forced to stand alone before "Germany swelled by Austria, Italy and Japan without a guarantee of British help."

Situation Held Changed.

The council's statement said it believed France "must adapt to new circumstances the convention concluded on bases which in fact no longer exist today."

Reasons given for readaptation of the Franco-Czech treaty to "new circumstances" included:

1. The treaty is expressly tied to the Locarno pact which Germany denounced.

2. The treaty is based on Article 16 of the League of Nations pact which was "applied in an incomplete and ineffective manner during the invasion and conquest of Ethiopia, and was not applied during the invasion of Manchuria, on the occasion of the Spanish war or

Franco Army Smashes Into Loyalist Catalonia On Drive to Barcelona

Spanish insurgent troops under Gen. Franco have crossed the border between Spain proper and Catalonia for the first time since the civil war began. They crossed Sunday at Masalcorreig and late in the day were reported in Fraga after they crossed the Cinca River. Insurgent strategy apparently is to divide strong Catalonia from loyalist Spain via Fraga to the sea and via Morella to the sea.

Franco in Catalonia.

By the United Press.

With the Nationalists in Catalonia, Spain (Monday), March 28.—Gen. Franco's Moroccan vanguard, smashing its way into Catalonia, today entered the stronghold of Fraga, at the gateway to the loyalist capital of Barcelona.

Insurgent radio stations announced the capture of Fraga at midnight after its evacuation by government forces under the bombardment of 160 insurgent bombing planes operating in the greatest mass attack, reportedly, in the history of aerial warfare.

Earlier bearded Moroccans, crossing the Cinca River under murderous fire, captured the Catalonian town of Masalcorreig, four miles south of Fraga. They were the first insurgent troops to set foot on Catalonian soil since the war broke out nearly 21 months ago.

Lerida is Next.

Eastward from Fraga, 16 miles along the broad highway leading from Franco's Saragossa base to Barcelona, lies Lerida, the general headquarters of the loyalist commander-in-chief, Gen. Sebastian Pozas.

Fraga's fall to Franco gave him a 70-mile advance along the highway in nine days, after the "Lenin line" of fortifications 4 miles in depth crumbled under the weight of the insurgents' tremendous assault by land and air.

Planes Destroy Village.

(A loyalist communique issued at Barcelona shortly before the insurgent announcement of Fraga's fall said Franco's advance had been "halted" a half mile outside the town along the banks of the Cinca. The communique said the attack by 160 insurgent planes on Fraga did enormous damage while 40 other enemy planes bombed the highway between Fraga and Lerida and later bombarded Pozas' headquarters at Lerida. The village of Rosell near Tarragona was said to have been destroyed by insurgent bombers.)

Loyalists were reported by insurgent aviation to be fleeing in droves.

Government forces fled from Fraga after blowing up the main bridge across the muddy Cinca and leaving a gaping hole in the steel and concrete fortifications guarding the border.

Gen. Juan Yague's Moroccans dashed 16½ miles along the Saragossa-Lerida highway from Candasnos in less than ten hours to reach the Cinca River and crumble the outer crust of the "Lenin line" that is about 4 miles deep and filled with Vienna, March 27.—Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Adolf Hitler's right-hand man and head of the German self-sufficiency campaign, presented gigantic plans today for amalgamation of Austro-German industry.

In a conference with his economic lieutenants, Goering approved a scheme for reopening the long-closed airplane factory at Wiener Neustadt, near Vienna, a project said to be close to his heart.

That is, however, only a beginning which provoked especial interest because the former Schusehnigg government tried vainly and repeatedly to help Wiener Neustadt, once a flourishing manufacturing center but lately one of the worst depression areas.

The plans, disclosed in Goering's Saturday address and brought closer to realization today, embrace increased production in agriculture, hydroelectricity development, mining, armament, chemistry and a stepping up of shipping and communications.

$2,500,000 in Unique Books Acquired for Folger Library

The Folger Shakespeare Library, of Washington, in a few months will place on its shelves 9,000 volumes, once valued at $2,500,000, and containing 787 books by early English writers, only one copy of each of which is known to exist, it was announced yesterday. Of the collection, an additional 857 books have only one known duplicate.

"The collection is one of the greatest and most famous in the world," according to Dr. Joseph Quincy Adams, director of the Folger Library. "Its coming to America is a matter of national importance."

The 9,000 books were printed in England up to the end of 1640, roughly from the reign of Henry VIII to the Cromwell Revolution, a period preceding and following Shakespeare.

They deal largely with historical and religious subjects, and some of them are from the press of Wynkyn de Worde, one of the most famous of the early English printers. One of the most valuable single items is the first issue of the first edition of Spenser's "Faerie Queene."

The books were purchased from Lady Harmsworth, widow of the collector. By an agreement with the London agent, the terms of the sale were not made public. It is known, however, that the collection cost approximately $2,500,-

'Field,' Not Matter, Real Basis Of Nature, Einstein's Theory

By the Associated Press.

Princeton, N. J., March 27—Albert Einstein, in a new book out tomorrow, predicts science is on the verge of discovering that matter is not the fundamental reality of nature.

He attempts, he says, to find a connection between the "world of ideas and the world of phenomena."

The one great reality, he believes, will be found to be "the field."

A "field," in this scientific sense, is something that both permeates and surrounds matter and man. Every-day examples are cited. Gravitation is a "field" that everyone feels. Magnetism is another field. A person in a strong magnetic field feels nothing; but his watch feels something, a force that stops it.

Another example is the electromagnetic field. Radio is an illustration; so is light.

"We could regard matter," Prof. Einstein says, "as the regions in space where the field is especially strong."

All the known examples of "the field" are manifestations of energy. Matter and energy have been shown for many years to be interchangeable. Energy has actual weight, though ever so slight. So the "field" has some weight.

Prof. Einstein cites the planet Mercury as an example of a sort

Bridges Claims 'Phony' Attack Hides TVA Dirt

Lays Roosevelt Inquiry to 'Wily' Michelson in Radio Debate.

Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, in a radio debate on the Tennessee Valley Authority—with Senator Lister Hill (Democrat) Alabama, over the Mutual Broadcasting System, last night, charged that, "the Administration's strategy has been to cover up TVA dirt by a phoney counter-attack."

The New Hampshire Senator said this was the Administration's adaptation of the strategy of Charles E. Michelson, publicity director of the Democratic National Committee. Bridges called Michelson "probably the greatest American technician in the science of directing public opinion."

"Now in love, in war and in politics the best defense is a vigorous attack," continued Bridges. "The grand strategist of the Democratic party, wily, skilled, able Mr. Michelson, knows that by heart.

Denies Inquiry "Honest."

"When we apply that rule to the current TVA situation, actions that seemed obscure become crystal clear.

"For three months or more the Nation has heard nothing good about the Tennessee Valley Authority. One member of the three directors has publicly preferred serious charges against the other two, including complicity in what he termed an attempted, 'barefaced steal.'

"How was this charge met? Was there an honest examination of the facts by the only method legally available, a Congressional investigation? There was not.

"Instead of that, the man who made the charge was given a drumhead court-martial of questionable legality by the President, who constituted himself the judge, the jury, the prosecuting attorney, the sheriff and the executioner all in one. The President's interest in the case was so strong that under ordinary procedure in a court of law he would have been automatically disqualified from judge or jury service in a similar situation.

"It was dramatic thus to hold a 'demonstration trial' after the Moscow technique. It was bold. It was daring. It was defense by attack. It was Michelsonian strategy.

"I suggest that the American public in the weeks to come remember this episode as the key to future strategy in dealing with the TVA investigation.

Resents "Defamation."

"TVA is what the public seeks to find the truth about. There has been almost no defense of TVA on the merits of the issue of the charges that have been leveled against it. The Administration's strategy has been to cover up TVA dirt by a phoney counterattack.

"The New Deal apologists in Congress and in the press impugn the motives of those who seek decency and honesty in government and who believe in a square deal for all. They revile us with scurrilous remarks and level false charges.

"Having been in a position of leadership in forcing the TVA investigation I seem to be the object, personally, of this contemptible smearing attack. Certainly such tactics are the strategy of desperation. When the truth fails as a defense the last resort is defamation of character.

Warns of Deceit.

"The battle for a thoroughgoing investigation of TVA is not yet won. This is your fight and we in Congress who are demanding an honest, impartial investigation are merely your representatives. Let's get the facts."

Senator Hill defended the President's action in removing Dr. Arthur Morgan as chairman and a member of the TVA and also defended the work of that agency. He said of the proposed Congressional investigaion, already voted by the Senate, that the House undoubtedly would pass the resolution immediately. Then the Alabaman added:

"No one could have a deeper interest in a thorough and searching investigation of all the activities and affairs of the Tennessee Valley Authority than the President, the Democratic Party, Senator Norris, its legislative father, and all of its friends.

"While the investigation is being made let us not be misled or deceived by statements and articles to be found in the press and in periodicals that have their origin in partisan or bitter opposition to the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Roosevelt Administration."

Folger Collection Gets Unique Books

Folger

000. The purchase was negotiated by President Stanley King, of Amherst College, the trustees of which administer the Folger Library.

The arrival of the books will place the Washington library in the ranks of the British Museum and the Bodleian in England and the Huntington Library in California as a magnet for scholars.

Despite its name, the Folger Library shelves are not restricted to Shakespeare's work. Folger, the bibliophile and philanthropist who founded and endowed the institution, considered the term Shakespearean as applying to the period in which Shakespeare lived.

The importance of the Harmsworth collection, according to Dr. Adams, is that it will fill in the intellectual and social background of the period. Folger concerned himself chiefly with the belles-lettres of Shakespeare's predecessors and contemporaries.

President Stanley sifted the books carefully before completing the purchase. Sir Leicester collected English Bibles, Lewis Carroll items and books on Canada and Australia as well as Elizabethan works.

Haycock Urges Suburbanites To Buy at Georgetown Stores

A. L. HAYCOCK.

More Sales Mean Larger Stocks, Which in Turn Will Bring More Customers, Civic Leader Points Out.

By Christine Sadler

If residents of Foxhall Village, Glover Park and Burleith would think of themselves as living in the suburbs of Georgetown and shop accordingly, the Georgetown Business Men's Association believes everybody would be happier.

"We are trying to encourage merchants to keep their stores open at night once a month just so visitors can come into see what is for sale here. Georgetown is in such a habit of closing down at dark every ngiht except Saturday that it is hard to popularize the idea," says A. L. Haycock, the association's president.

Confidence Needed.

One of the big jobs confronting his group is to bring the stores and the suburban residents eye to eye on this question of Georgetown shopping. The stores hesitate to put in great supplies of high class merchandise, because they cannot count on the residents. The residents are hesitant because they cannot count on finding what they need, Haycock points out.

Another aid to Georgetown business, the businessmen believe, would be "a solution to the traffic problem" that besets the section today. An overpass at K street has been suggested as a means of helping the swarms of automobiles get through the area without filling the main street to overflowing.

'We are opposed to the overpass idea, however, because it would encourage quick travel through the town—and no stopping. We are in favor of connected Olive and Prospect streets, thus making a new thoroughfare from Twenty-ninth to Thirty-sixth.

"That would relieve the crowded aspect of the situation and provide more space for parking of shoppers," Haycock says.

Want Complete Suffrage.

The Georgetown Business Men's Association has been in operation about seven years and has more than 50 members. Haycock is serving his second term as president, although he skipped a term in between.

In addition to a solution of the traffic problem and increased shopping, the group is on record in favor of developing the waterfront of Georgetown as a park and for complete suffrage "or none."

Haycock was born in Georgetown and operates a business which has been at the same location on M street for 97 years. He is manager of Joseph F. Birch's Sons, funeral directors, which was established by his wife's grandfather. His son, now in the business with him, will be the fourth generation running the establishment.

Enjoy Boats, Gunning.

An experienced boatman and good shot, Haycock is an active member of the Kenilwood Skeet Club and has his own cruiser—which he keeps in the Georgetown harbor during the winter and runs down to his play on the Bay in the summer. He classifies gunning and boating as his main hobbies.

He is third vice president of the Federation of Business Men's Associations, president of the District of Columbia Funeral Directors Association, first vice president of the Georgetown Lions Club, past president of the "Y" Men's Club, and a member of the Georgetown Citizens Association, the West Washington Baptist Church, Potomac Lodge No. 5 F. A. A. M., Potomac Chapter of Masonry, and the Columbia Council. Also, he is a director of the Citizens Equitable Association and a director of Edes Home.

Desk Bears Exploring.

One of the chief past-times Haycock has these days is "exploring in the drawers of a roll-top desk" at which he worked for 21 years without much curiosity as to its contents. "When I inherited the desk from my father-in-law, I just slipped in behind it and kept working," he says.

He would still be at the same desk, he admits, if it had not been for Mrs. Haycock, who took advantage of his absence one day to substitute an up-to-date model. Now he wonders why he hadn't started rummaging in the old desk sooner, as he finds pictures, letters and relics of all descriptions. The Haycocks live at 3034 M street northwest, and have only the one son.

On Wednesday—B. Houston McCeney, president of the Georgetown Business Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Labor Unit Settles 9,150 Disputes

The National Labor Relations Board last night announced more than half of the 9,150 labor disputes it had settled since 1935 had been ended by agreement of labor and capital.

Through its efforts, the board said, 519 threatened strikes involving 131,589 employes had been averted, and an additional 1,113 strikes had been settled and 177,127 workers reinstated after strikes or lockouts. A total of 12,485 cases affecting 3,247,678 employes have been submitted to it since autumn, 1935, and by March 1 all but 3,335 cases had been settled.

Keeps in Touch by Phone to Hull; Also Watching Stock Market.

By the United Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., March 27.—President Roosevelt, informed by the State Department in Washington by telephone of latest developments, tonight studied the complex foreign situation.

The Chief Executive sat before an open fire in the living room of the little White House and examined the possible effects of this Nation's cessation April 1 of purchasing silver from Mexico. He also awaited further reactions to Secretary of State Cordell Hull's proposal that the United States lead 29 other nations in providing asylum for politically oppressed.

The temporary White House offices withheld comment on cessation of Mexican silver purchases, disclosed in Washington by a high Administration official.

Watching Stock Maret.

Mr. Roosevelt went to his desk late this afternoon after a quiet day at the Warm Springs Foundation for paralysis sufferers. In the morning, accompanied by William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to France, he drove to the foundation's little white brick chapel for its dedication services. The Right Rev. Henry J. Mikell, Episcopal Bishop of Atlanta, dedicated the little church.

Mr. Roosevelt plans to work on his mail and papers tomorrow and to watch developments in the New York stock market. Sources close to the President said the recent declines in market prices of stocks had resulted in several telephone conversations between Warm Springs and Washington.

White House Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre, in charge of temporary offices here, insisted the calls only were to keep apprised of the news.

To Capital This Week-End.

This week, the President will study further the recommendations of a group of Government experts regarding relieving financial burdens of railroads. It was expected he would transmit the recommendations to Congress soon, if he deems them satisfactory.

In all probability, he will leave here for Washington the end of this week.

Mrs. Roosevelt arrived tonight after a tour of the West Coast. Elliott, a son, who had been expected this afternoon, was delayed because weather prevented his plane leaving Fort Worth, Tex.

Following this morning's church services, Mr. Roosevelt sat in his new open touring automobile and posed for cameramen. He then drove to his cottage and told Bullitt, soon to return to his Paris post, good-by.

The Sabbath, in contrast to the warm sunny days of last week, was cool and overcast.

Peace Guarantee For Philippines Sought by Group

By the United Press.

The Congressional isolationist bloc is preparing to campaign for "neutralization" of the Philippine Islands through post-independence treaties which would guarantee them against being turned into bloody battlefields by land-hungry powers, the United Press learned last night.

The treaties would become effective after the Asiatic Archipelage obtains full independence in 1946, and would embrace all powers with vital interests in the Far East, including the United States, Japan, Great Britain, China, France and the Netherlands.

Planes, Machines Half Of U. S. Export to Soviet

By the Associated Press.

Aircraft material and machinery composed almost half of the United States' exports to Soviet Russia in 1937, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

Exports of all products, including re-exports, to Soviet Russia were valued at $42,903,000, an increase of 28 per cent over 1936. Of that total, $20,195,000 was for machinery and vehicles, and $3,213,000 for aircraft and parts.

U. S. Suspends Purchases of Mexican Silver

Mexico

Mexican and other foreign situations, would not comment on Morgenthau's announcement.

The latter's statement as issued from Sea Island, Ga., where he is vacationing, follows:

"In view of the decision of the Government of the United States to re-examine certain of its financial and commercial relationships with Mexico, the Treasury will defer continuance of the monthly silver purchase arrangements with Mexico until further notice."

Earlier in the day the Treasury had merely refused to deny President Cardenas' statement that the agreement had been abrogated. A department spokesman had admitted, however, that the Treasury had made no commitments for purchase of silver after April 1, when the agreement, in effect since January 1, expires.

Policy Set in 1933.

The American policy under which Mexican silver has been purchased, had its origin in the early days of the New Deal. The original agricultural adjustment act, passed in 1933, authorized the Treasury to buy silver at higher than the market price. Advocates of this policy contended it would help raise farm prices and stimulate employment in the silver mining industry.

Then Congress passed the silver-purchase act of 1934. It authorized the Treasury to buy enough silver so that it would have $3 worth of the white metal for each $1 worth of gold. It also authorized the Treasury to issue currency backed by silver at the rate of $1.29 an ounce.

The Treasury never reached the act's silver purchase goal because of constant gold receipts.

The agreement with Mexico was regarded chiefly as a "good-neighbor" act, although the fact that this Government was committed to the silver-buying program was an additional cause. The Treasury entered into its first understanding with Mexico in 1935, agreeing to buy virtually all of that nation's newly mined silver.

An agreement that purchases would be continued was reached about last Christmas when the Mexican finance minister conferred here with Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. The arrangement became effective January 1.

Under the agreement, the Treasury made monthly purchases at the New York price of approximately 44½ cents an ounce. The Treasury has always contended that the understanding merely was that this Government would buy some Mexican silver this year. Commitments were usually announced in the last week of the month preceding the one in which they were to be fulfilled.

President Cardenas in his manifesto to the nation was reported by the Associated Press as having urged miners and laborers to remain tranquil. He stated immediate steps would be taken "to prevent the effects of this decision from reacting injuriously upon our economy."

Calls for "Serenity."

"We desire that, once the Nation learns of this fact, (the agreement's abrogation) that it be judged with the necessary serenity and justice, since it is an act executed by the United States Government.

"We have taken the necessary steps so that the funds derived from the exploitation of petroleum be used preferentially for the development and utilization of the industry, and for the amortization of the debt contracted with the nationalization of petroleum. . .

"It is necessary to take into account also that the government of the United States has announced that the purchase of part of the (country's) silver production it has been making of Mexico will be canceled after the first day of April."

Just what new market Mexico expects to find for her silver remained undetermined last night. The United States Treasury has been buying 5,000,000 ounces of newly mined Mexican silver each month, paying around $2,500,000 for it at the artificially maintained New York price. These transactions gave Mexico sizeable profits.

Meanwhile Vicente Cortes Herrera, Administrator of the expropriated oil industry, said he had had inquiries from sources in the United States and Germany concerning purchases of oil. He did not specify the interested parties.

Post Editorial Writer Wins Nieman Harvard Fellowship

John Clark Will Have Year in Which to Study Latin America.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., March 27.—Five editorial writers, including John McL. Clark, of The Washington Post, and four reporters, tonight were named winners of the first Nieman Fellowships for study at Harvard University.

Selected from 312 newspapers in 44 States, the fellows are John McL. Clark, editorial writer on The Washington Post; Edwin A. Lahey, 36, reporter on the Chicago Daily News; Frank S. Hopkins, 30, reporter on the Baltimore Sun; Osburn Zuber, 34, chief editorial writer on the Birmingham (Ala.) News; Irving Dilliard, 33, editorial writer on the St. Louis Post-Dispatch; Louis M. Lyons, 40, reporter on the Boston Globe; Hilary H. Lyons, jr., 29, chief editorial writer on the Mobile (Ala.) Press Register; Wesley Fuller, 25, reporter on the Boston Herald, and Edwin J. Paxton, jr., 25, chief editorial writer and associate editor of the Paducah (Ky.) Sun-Democrat.

The fellowships were established under the Luscius W. Nieman and Agnes Wahl Nieman fund of approximately $1,000,000, which was bequeathed to Harvard "to promote and elevate the standards of journalism in the United States and educate persons deemed specially qualified for journalism."

Nieman was the founder and publisher of the Milwaukee (Wis.) Journal. The bequest to Harvard was made in his widow's will.

The fellows will select courses from the regular curriculum.

Clark, who received an A. B. from Dartmouth College, has been in newspaper work for six years, specializing recently in editorials on Latin-American affairs. He will study Latin-American history.

Lahey will study economics, history, and political science. Hopkins will take courses in political and social science, while Zuber will study economics and government.

Two fellows, Dilliard and Paxton, chose the social sciences while Louis M. Lyons selected history, political science and law. Hilary H. Lyons, jr., will study economics and Fuller will study science.

The fellows, who will enter Harvard next September for study during the ensuing academic year, will not be allowed to engage in newspaper work during the period of residence here nor can they be candidates for any degree.

JOHN McL. CLARK.

The awards were made on the recommendation of the committee on Nieman fellowships. The members are John Stuart Bryan, publisher of the Richmond, (Va.) News Leader, and president of the College of William and Mary, chairman; Ellery Sedgwick, of Boston, editor of the Atlantic Monthly magazine, and Walter Lippmann, of New York, special writer for the New York Herald Tribune and other papers. All three are members of the Harvard Board of Overseers.

Modern Forum Asks Repeal of Neutrality Act

30 Civic and Labor Groups Will Meet Tonight in Protest.

Nearly 200 members of a Modern Forum audience yesterday urged repeal of the American neutrality act and asked that foreign policy committees of Congress hold hearings. Meanwhile, 30 civic and labor organizations prepared to meet tonight at 8 o'clock at the Masonic Auditorium, Thirteenth and H streets northwest, to protest the act.

Action of the forum audience followed an address by James Waterman Wise, former editor, in which he charged the American people had "betrayed" the Spanish government by allowing arms to reach the rebels through Italy and Germany. He described Fascist dictators as "gangsters like Dillinger" and said "the Fascist bloc in Europe is bluffing democracy out of existence."

Resolution Passed.

The resolution for Congressional hearings was introduced from the floor by Edna O. Anderson, of 705 Eighteenth street northwest, and was ruled in order by Senator Schwartz (Democrat), Wyoming, chairman of the meeting. It was amended to include a demand for repeal of the act and was adopted without a negative vote.

Speaking from the floor, Representative Hill (Democrat), of Washington, said he had been "tricked" into voting for the present neutrality measure forbidding sale of arms to either of the Spanish belligerents on the understanding it would apply to other countries. He said, "I would vote to repeal it right now."

Will Meet Tonight.

The groups meeting tonight will protest against failure of Congress to hold hearings for revision of the neutrality act, as well as its refusal to act in the light of President Roosevelt's Chicago speech, when the President demanded a "quarantine" against aggressor nations.

Representative Byron Scott (Democrat), of California, will be chairman of the meeting. Speakers will be Herman J. Reissig, executive secretary of the North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy; N. P. Alifas, president, district 44, the International Order of Machinists; Representative John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota; Eleanor Nelson, secretary-treasurer of the United Federal Workers of America, and Henry Hart, a writer and publisher.

Among those expected to attend are Thomas Wolfe, Josephine Herbst, Erskine Caldwell, Margaret Bourke-White, Walter Pach, Ella Winter, O. Soglow, Muriel Draper, Katherine Locke and Miguel de Corvorubias.

The meeting is under auspices of the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy and the Washington Labor Peace group of Government and Labor unions. Each participating group will be seated in an assigned section of the auditorium.

Fifteen hundred persons are expected to be present.

By the Associated Press.

Millionaires to Moscow!

That describes in part at least the State Department's policy in picking envoys to the Soviet Union.

The just-announced appointment of Alexander Kirk, Chicago millionaire and veteran of the foreign service, to be counselor of embassy in Moscow, is in accord with it.

The State Department acts on the theory that communist Russia wants us represented by capitalists.

Diplomats say Russia does not want any country to send representatives who lean toward socialism or communism—they might meddle in Soviet political affairs.

The United States' first ambassador to the Soviet Union was wealthy William Bullitt, now Ambassador to Paris.

Bullitt's successor was multi-millionairs Joseph E. Davies, who has been named Ambassador to Belgium and will leave Moscow for Brussels shortly.

Alexander Kirk has many qualifications for his new post in addition to wealth. He has spent over 20 years in the diplomatic service, serving in Berlin, The Hague, Tokyo, Peiping and Mexico City. He was attached to the American commission to negotiate the peace in Paris after the World War.

He was assistant to the Secretary of State in 1919-20, and executive officer of the department in 1927-1928.

U. S. Following Traditions as Refugee Haven

Puritans and Huguenots Forerunners of Many Political Fugitives.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull's proposal to 29 nations to join the United States in aiding the political refugees from Austria and Germany carries on a firmly fixed American tradition.

The New World has been and is a haven for the politically oppressed.

This tradition goes back to the time of the early founders of America, the Puritans, the Huguenots and the Catholics of Maryland. These were all politically persecuted peoples.

After the United States became a nation the first wave of political emigres came as a result of the French revolution of 1789. There was another after Waterloo, when hundreds of Napoleon's veterans left France.

Great Names Included.

The United States again was the haven of the politically persecuted following the failure of the numerous revolutions of 1848 in Europe.

St. Louis, Milwaukee and Cincinnati, among other cities, owe large parts of their population to the Germans who came over at that time and later did valiant service in the Civil War.

Thousands of persecuted Jews in Russia and Poland came later.

Another wave was made up of Cubans who fled to the United States from the oppression of Madrid's representatives.

There are great names in the list of refugees the United States has welcomed—such names as Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, afterward Napoleon III of France; Joseph Bonaparte, King of Spain, and Giuseppe Garibaldi, the Italian liberator.

Carl Schurz an Exile.

Among other famous political refugees have been:

Carl Schurz, an exile from Germany, who became a United States Senator and Secretary of the Interior.

Former Presidents Machado, of Cuba; Diaz and Calles, Mexico; Davila, Chile.

Carlo Sforza, formerly Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Gaetano Salvemini, Italian editor.

And Now Thomas Mann.

Kerensky, former premier of Russia and Thomas Mann, German Nobel prize winner, are temporarily in the United States at present. Mann has said he would make his home in this country.

In recent times the United States has been very sympathetic to international movements to take care of political refugees.

When the Fritjof Nansen Committee was set up by the League of Nations to give a legal status to the White Russians, the United States agreed to recognize what became known as the Nansen passport.

When hundreds of thousands of Greeks were transferred from Turkish jurisdiction to Greece, three Americans served successively as chairmen of the League committee which managed and financed their transport and settlement.

They were Henry Morgenthau, sr., father of the present Secretary of the Treasury; Charles P. Howland and Charles B. Eddy.

Captain, Held Mad, Sailing In to Port

San Pedro, Calif., March 27 (AP).—The tuna clipper, Sea Tern, was en route today to Guaymas, Mexico, where her radio operator, E. J. Van Jaynes, planned to lay before the United States consul a dispute with the ship's master, Capt. Raymond Dragich.

Van Jaynes yesterday wirelessed A. L. Woodruff, Federal shipping commissioner here, saying: "Fear death aboard ship. Captain abusive, apparently insane." Woodruff informed Van Jaynes the boat was outside American jurisdiction, and advised him to call on the consul.

Van Jaynes reported back that Capt. Dragich was taking him and the crew of ten to Guaymas.

2 Circus Men Lease Million Dollar Pier

Sarasota, Fla., March 27 (U.P.).—Young's Million Dollar Pier in Atlantic City, N. J., has been leased for 14 years by two circus men, it was announced tonight.

George A. Hamid, of New York, president of the International Booking Agency which handles circus acts, and S. W. Gumpertz, of Sarasota, formerly vice president and general manager of the Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus, and will rename it Hamid's Million Dollar Pier. They will spend $250,000 on improvements.

Britain Maps Spy Hunt As Planes Are Damaged

London (Monday), March 28 (AP).—The Daily Herald said today that five Royal Air Force high-speed "battle" bombers were "maliciously damaged" at the Fairey Aviation Company's Stockport factory.

Intelligence officers of the air ministry will begin a secret inquiry of the sabotage, the newspaper said. The air ministry feared such activity might endanger its air force rearmament program and was considering counter-espionage activities.

Joel Wolfsohn to Talk On Anglo-Jewish Press

The Jewish Community Center will hold the last of a series of discussions of journalism Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. at the center. Joel Wolfsohn, executive secretary of the National Power Policy Commission, will speak on the Anglo-Jewish Weekly Press. Isidore Hershfield, trustee of the center and member of the National Press Club, will preside.

Previous meetings have dealt with Washington press galleries, the Soviet press, the British press and the Yiddish press.

Fifty Officers Start Training In Mobilization

D. C., Maryland Reserve and Guard Represented in National Program.

By the Associated Press.

Fifty National Guard and reserve officers, specialists in obtaining man power, will start training today for any future "M-Day"—Mobilization Day.

The War and Navy departments will teach them how to mobilize 2,000,000 men in four months in the event of war. The course will continue through April 9.

Most of the reserve officers are from the Eastern Seaboard. Fourteen States, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico will be represented.

Those called included:

Brig. Gen. William L. Horner, of Charleston, adjutant general of West Virginia; Lieut. Col. Jere M. Leaman, of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania National Guard; Lieut. Col. Ralph E. MacLeod, of Boston, Massachusetts National Guard; Lieut. Col. Robert E. Rinehart, of New York, Special Reserve.

Lieut. Col. Ralph K. Strassman, of New York, Special Reserve; Lieut. Col. Ralph Smith, of Boston, Massachusetts National Guard; Lieut. Comdr. D. S. H. Howard, of Utica, N. Y., Naval Reserve; Lieut. Col. M. J. Torlinski, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Naval Reserve; Lieut. Comdr. Harold R. Keiler, of Newton Center, Mass., Naval Reserve.

Maj. Ralph T. Smith, of Paxtang, Pa., Pennsylvania National Guard; Lieut. Col. Francis G. Shearer, of Hartford, Connecticut National Guard; Maj. E. Leslie Medford, of Annapolis, Md., Maryland National Guard; Maj. Paul A. Kind, of Camden, N. J., Special Reserve; Maj. Ray D. Wells, of Falmouth, Mass., Special Reserve.

Maj. Louis C. Pedlar, of New York City, Special Reserve; Maj. John A. Wilson, adjutant general of Puerto Rico; Maj. W. Storey, of Wilmington, Delaware National Guard; Capt. Henry A. Bailey, of Montpelier, Vt., Vermont National Guard; Capt. Nathaniel Nathanson, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania National Guard.

Capt. Henry S. Wheeler, Newport, R. I., mayor, Rhode Island National Guard; First Lieut. Hugh J. Kelley, of New York City, Special Reserve; First Lieut. J. D. Noell, of Charleston, W. Va., Special Reserve.

Cherry Blooms' Biggest Sunday Masses Vast Crowd of 183,000 and couples holding hands.

Cherry

Men and boys outnumbered women and girls, both among the sightseers and among the fishing folk who dropped their lines from bridges and walls of the basin with never a glance at the famous blooms.

At some spots around the basin blown petals covered the water several feet out from shore, providing a pinkish border for the water which held reflections of millions of cherry clusters in full bloom overhead.

At 4:30 p. m. the temperature was 61 degrees, the highest registered for the day. The lowest was 41, at 6:45 o'clock yesterday morning. Last night the mercury was to go as low as 36 degrees, although no damaging frost was expected by the Weather Bureau because of cloudiness.

Showers were forecast for tonight or tomorrow. If they come tonight the proposed $10,000 display of fireworks will be postponed until tomorrow night. The fireworks event is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock tonight. There will be no chair charges for those who wish to watch it from the Tidal Basin.

Vying with the cherry blossom show, although unintentionally, was the twenty-fifth annual amaryllis show at the Department of Agriculture greenhouses, Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue.

The display includes 1,200 bulbs and, like the cherry trees, is earlier than experts had anticipated. It will remain open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. daily through next Sunday.

Several thousand flowers are shown ranging in color from dark velvety red through shades of pink, orange and yellow to pure, crinkled white. Some of the specimens measure 11 inches across. New flowers developed by department experts are included in the display, which is the largest amaryllis exhibition in the country.

To handle increased traffic occasioned by the cherry blosoms and the fact that folks like to travel on clear spring days, the Metropolitan traffic police yesterday called back all available men and increased the force from its ordinary Sunday strength of 15 to 74, with 11 "rookies" from the Police School helping out.

From precinct stations one and three between 60 and 70 men each were put in the traffic field, making around 250 policemen on duty in the downtown area. The usual Sunday park police force was increased from 20 to 60.

Yesterday was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the planting of the cherry trees in Washington. West of the John Paul Jones Memorial, set at the foot of the first tree planted, by Mrs. William Howard Taft, is this legend:

"Japanese cherry, prunus yedoensis. A gift from the city of Tokio. Planted March 27, 1912, by Mrs. William H. Taft in the presence of the Ambassador from Japan and Viscountess Chinda."

Because it was Cherry Blossom Sunday and visitors were interested in the whole city, all park fountains yesterday were in full play.

Barring rain and exceptionally high winds, the cherry blossoms should last out this week, park officials say.

Wheeler Demands Railroads Reduce Capital Structure

By the United Press.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, will insist that the forthcoming plan by the Government to rehabilitate the $26,000,000,000 railroad industry calls for sweeping reductions in capital structure, it was learned yesterday.

Senator Wheeler appeared secretly before the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States last Friday night at their request and outlined his views on the current rail situation.

He said he opposed not only Government ownership of the railroads, but also Federal subsidies which would give the Government indirect control of the carriers. He agreed that the plight of the industry was desperate, but argued that the investigation of his committee into railroad financing showed that they brought much of their present trouble upon themselves.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., March 27.—The Berkeley Springs Bicycle Club was organized here yesterday, under sponsorship of W. B. Simmons, superintendent of county schools, with New Carroll named as president, and Kirk Bartlett secretary, and 15 charter members.

Labor Board Issue For C. U. Debaters

The Shahan Debating Society of Catholic University will debate with representatives of Washington and Lee University on the National Labor Relations Board in McMahon Hall at 8:15 tonight. The local debaters will argue for the negative on "Resolved: That the National Labor Relations Board should be empowered to enforce arbitration in all industrial disputes."

Stanford Schewel and John Jones will represent Washington and Lee. The Shahan debaters will be Leo Schumacher, of Cleveland, and John Morrow, of Scotts Bluff, Nebr. Newly elected officers of the Catholic University Club are William J. Hotz, of Omaha, president; Walter Donovan, of Little Falls, N. Y., manager; Joseph Learned, of Denver, assistant manager; John J. Hart, of Little Falls, secretary, and James M. Mangano, of Rochester, assistant secretary.

New England Told It Is to Blame for Its Own 'Decline'

Boston, Marh 27 (AP).—A. A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, blamed New England industry for its own "decline" today and bluntly asserted that it needed "imagination and a new approach." Berle spoke at a convention launching Labor's Nonpartisan League as a "political force" in Massachusetts.

Dean Gilkey Calls For New Interest In Missions' Work

Dr. Charles W. Gilkey, dean of the chapel, University of Chicago, speaking yesterday in Rankin Chapel at Howard University, said the times called for revival of interest in foreign missions by spiritual forces reaching beyond race, group or class.

"Great culture," he said, "is not held together by creed or doctrines or institutions, but by religious experience and devotion and consecration. The second decade of the twentieth century brought great inventions calculated to make of all the world a neighborhood. But forces of racialism, nationalism and groupism have driven mankind to the brink of the gorge of destruction.

"Idolatry of leaders in the fourth decade of this century, comparable with idolatry of deities of a pagan era, requires of the time a supernational, a superracial and a supergroup religion. It is the heritage of Christianity to possess such a religion in an age as dark as the world has ever known."

Ickes Deplores Pearson's Death

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes said yesterday the Nation had lost a public servant of outstanding character in the death of Dr. Paul M. Pearson, 67, assistant director of the United States Housing Authority and former governor of the Virgin Islands. Dr. Pearson died Saturday night in San Francisco.

Lawrence W. Cramer, present governor of the Virgin Islands, now visiting here, said:

"The social and economic rehabilitation program established by Gov. Paul M. Pearson will stand as a monument to this energetic, faithful and socially minded public servant."

Rescue Squad Revives Victim of Exhaust Gas

Found unconscious in a garage at 1115 Flower avenue, Takoma Park, Md., Ralph McWilliams, 36, of 3426 Sixteenth street northwest, was revived yesterday morning by the Takoma Park Rescue Squad. McWilliams said he was repairing an automobile and was overcome by carbon monoxide fumes.

Nearly a Third Of District Idle Aged 15 to 24

Colored Number 60.1 Per Cent of Unemployed Here, Census Reveals.

Nearly one-third of the 37,615 District residents totally unemployed in November were between the ages of 15 and 24, it was revealed yesterday by a detailed analysis of data gathered in the Unemployment Census.

Of the same group, 22,683, or 77 per cent, received no income, except relief payments during the week before registration. During the year, preceding registration, 11,139, or 36.2 per cent of those reporting, had no employment.

Twenty-eight per cent of the totally unemployed had no dependents, while 9.1 per cent had four or more. Colored persons numbered 60.1 per cent of the jobless.

An additional group of 9,801 Washington residents were classified as "emergency workers." A further survey will furnish statistics on the city's partially employed, it was announced by John D. Biggers, unemployment census administrator.

Mother of 4 Wins $10,000 Prize With Her First Novel

New York, March 27 (AP).—Elizabeth Seifert, of Moberly, Mo., mother of four children, has been awarded a prize of $10,000 for her first novel, "Young Doctor Galahad."

The prize was offered by Dodd, Mead & Co., New York publishers, and the Redbook Magazine.

Mrs. Seifert was born in Washington, Mo., and attended Washington University at St. Louis. It was her ambition to study medicine, but bad health and parental opposition intervened.

After graduation, however, she became a chemical secretary in a hospital, and after marriage with John Gasparotti her medical bent served her four children well, she says.

Her novel is based on hospital observations, and on the problems of a doctor in a small city.

Labor Chiefs Back Wilson for Senate

Philadelphia, March 27 (AP).—Labor organizers today came to the support of Mayor S. Davis Wilson's candidacy, as yet not officially announced for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate. The labor leaders circulated petitions for him and said they would file them at Harrisburg tomorrow.

Wilson said yesterday at the dedication of the municipal airport which bears his name:

"Either Gov. Earle or I will be the next Senator from Pennsylvania. I have an idea that Gov. Earle is going to be retired from public life."

Freight Rate Rise Placed in Effect

By the Associated Press.

The Nation's railroads began charging higher freight rates at midnight last night. They put into effect rate increases averaging slightly more than 5 per cent, which were authorized recently by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The trucking industry also had I. C. C. authority to increase its rates at the same time, to the same extent as the rail carriers.

Federal Funds To Aid Students Cut One-Third

Youth Administration Pays $112,050 a Year to 11 Colleges in D. C.

The National Youth Administration during the present academic year has reduced financial aid to college and graduate students by one-third over the preceding year, Aubrey Williams, director of the youth program, announced yesterday.

Total allotment of funds this year is $10,236,726.25, issued to States on a monthly basis, Williams reported.

In the District, 810 students in 11 colleges and universities are receiving a monthly grant of $12,450, or a total allotment for the year of $112,050. Williams' report showed these grants divided as follows:

Institution.	Student. Quota.	Monthly. Allot.	Yearly. Allot.
American	36	$840	$7,560
Catholic	139	2,085	18,765

New York State was first in amount of financial assistance for students, and California second, while assistance to students in New York City alone was almost as great as in California.

Williams said the reductions in allotments this year resulted from cuts in the 1937 relief appropriation. The total of students receiving aid in all the States, the District and Puerto Rico this year is 75,993. Last year's total was 124,818.

ating Austrian unemployment entirely.

Goering gave himself only a year in which to make his plans and promises good after which he said Austria could decide whether she likes the Hitler system better than that of former Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg

One of the first projects will be the campaign for more babies. Young Austrian couples, many of whom had abandoned hope of marrying because of poverty, already are asking about the promised Hitler marriage loans.

It was announced that the period of grace for tax payment has been extended a month.

Goering plans to visit important industrial centers in the next few days. It is expected he will take a personal interest in locating and building a series of new barracks and military posts.

He already has had a glimpse of Austria's Danube flotilla which, it is understood, will be enlarged under the German war ministry.

Power Plants Planned.

Other projects being worked out include:

The building of water power plants in the Hohe Tauern Mountains and at Grein on the Danube, doubling the output of the Alpine Mauntain iron mines in Styria, development of copper, magnesium and tin deposits in Carinthia, further drilling for oil in the Vienna basin and construction of highways on the German pattern to link Vienna, Salzburg, Fassau and Graz.

Goering also is studying all means of effecting anschluss in spirit as well as materially.

Athletic clubs and contests are put under the Berlin aegis. Postage rates are to be reduced. Vacations in northern Germany are promised for 100,000 poor Austrian children. Farmers will be helped with state-owned machinery, state-furnished drainage and fertilizer and thousands of soil conservation programs.

Newspapers bannerlined an "amen" to these plans: "Hermann, we shall achieve this."

Meanwhile, Austrian Roman Catholic bishops in a solemn declaration read in all Catholic churches, voiced their recognition of the Nazi movement's achievements and proclaimed their loyalty as Germans to Germany.

The declaration was signed by Theodore Cardinal Innitzer and five other Catholic prelates.

It stated they acted "from innermost conviction and voluntarily" and added it was their duty on April 10, the day of the plebiscite on Austro-German union, to register their allegiance to Germany.

The declaration said:

"From innermost conviction and voluntarily, we, the undersigned bishops of the Austrian church province declare in connection with great historic events in German Austria:

"We gladly acknowledge that the National Socialist movement has achieved and is achieving outstanding results in the sphere of national and economic reconstruction as well as in social welfare—especially for the most needy section of the populace.

"We also are convinced that through the efforts of the National Socialist movement the menace of the all-destroying godless bolshevism was averted.

"The bishops give their sincerest blessings to these efforts in time to come and will also advise the faithful in this spirit.

"On the day of the plebiscite it will be for us bishops a self-evident national duty to declare our loyalty as Germans to the German Reich and we expect of all faithful Christians that they know what they owe to their people."

The declaration as distributed to newspapers through the Deutsches Narichten Bureau (official German News Agency) was preceded by a foreword signed by Theodore Cardinal Innitzer for the Church Province of Austria and Bishop Sigismund Waitz for the Church Province of Salzburg.

This said:

"After thoroughgoing consultation, we Bishops of Austria, in view of the great historic hours which Austria's people are experiencing and conscious that in our lifetime the thousand-year-old yearning of our people for union in the great Reich of the Germans is finding fulfillment, have decided to address the following proclamation to our faithful.

"To God, To Caesar."

"We can do this all the more free from anxiety since the representative of the Fuehrer for the plebiscite in Austria, District-Leader (Joseph) Buerckel, has announced the forthright line of his policy which is under the motto 'Render to God all the belongings of God and to Caesar all the belongings of Caesar.'"

Hitler Sees Finnish General.

Berlin, March 27 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler turned his attention today to the military situation in northeastern Europe as he took a day off from oratory in the Austro-German plebiscite campaign.

In the Sunday calm of his Wilhelmstrasse chancellery, he had an earnest conversation with Gen. H. Oestermann, commanderinchief of Finland's armed forces.

Official word of Hitler's meeting with the Finnish general was confined to the bare announcement that Oestermann, accompanied by Aarne Worimaa, Finnish minister, was received by the Fuehrer.

Franco Breaks Through Line Into Catalonia

Spain

Bombers Smash Lines.

The most difficult part of the line, from the insurgent standpoint, is along a plateau behind Fraga dominating the entire Cinca Valley.

Yague sent aerial photographers over the fortifications during the morning. These photographs were used to guide fleets of bombers that took off from near Bujaraloz a couple of hours later, bombing and machine gunning the loyalists until they retreated. As they fled Franco's tanks, Moroccan cavalry and later infantry columns moved up.

Insurgent leaders said that with the Cinca line of fortifications broken the loyalists were in grave danger of being driven back into Barcelona itself without a halt because they depended upon the "Lenin line" to hold in their last stand in defense of Catalonia.

Lerida, headquarters of the loyalist generalissimo, Sebastian Pozas, was within sight tonight and the shells of Franco's big artillery were falling in and around it.

Rome Warns French.

[Meanwhile, an official Italian statement in Rome warned France that any French intervention in Spain "might compromise peace on the European continent," the Associated Press reported.

[The organ of the Italian foreign office, Informazione Diplomatica, published the statement declaring Italy was "following with greatest attention the campaign of French Leftists for intervention in Spain."

[Italy was pictured as ready to carry out her promise to withdraw her troops from the Spanish insurgent forces as soon as France and Russia indicated they were ready to do the same in regard to Spain.

[At the same time an official communique announced heavy Italian losses in Spain since the Spanish insurgents launched their latest offensive March 9. Casualties were listed as, 29 officers and 253 men killed, 123 officers and 1,349 men wounded, and 33 missing.—Editor's note.]

During the last 24 hours Franco's 120,000 troops, spread out along a 137-mile line from north to south along the Catalonian border, have advanced in steam-roller fashion, flattening out all resistance.

From the north two columns from Huesca under Gen. Emilio Solchaga pushed southward through the mountains toward the Cinca River to join Gen. Yague.

Farther south Gen. Miguel Aranda drove southward across the Castellon border—into the former kingdom of Valencia—and took Zorita, to put him within 35 miles of the Mediterranean east coast.

Aranda's army held the spearhead of Franco's drive to the sea to cut loyalist Spain in half, but the fiercest fighting was around Fraga because of the heavy enemy concentrations there.

Insurgent field headquarters reported that since the start of the big push on March 9 more than 13,000 prisoners have been taken.

Insurgent leaders said that with the abandonment of Fraga the loyalist command would have virtually no means of defending Lerida and the important towns of Tamarite and Benabarre.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, March 27 (U.P.).—Thousands of women and girls in Barcelonia tonight offered to take over operation of Catalonia's war industries and demanded that every able-bodied man and boy be rushed to the front to halt the insurgents' "barbarous invasion."

The women, members of a dozen loyalist organizations, issued a manifesto in the name of the women's anti-Fascist front as Gen. Franco's armies broke through the Rio Cinca defense lines and invaded Catalonian soil in their drive to the eastern seaboard.

The defense ministry of Barcelonia admitted the government's armies were "slowly retreating" along the 137-mile front on Catalonia's borders, because "the production of our war factories is inadequate to cope with the huge quantities of Italian war material arriving daily" for the rebels.

A communique described a "valiant and desperate" stand by loyalist troops along the Catalonian border against motorized rebel columns sweeping across the Curdial Plain upon the city of Fraga.

Encirclement of the Ebro Basin by Franco's northern column pushing toward Fraga might have disastrous results upon Catalonia's war industries if it brought the Grosa Mountain region into the trap because it is there that the hydroelectric works supplying Catalonia with power for lighting, transport and factories are situated.

The penetration of the insurgents into Catalonia aroused fears for the safety of more than 50,000 anarchists, communists and political syndicalists in Barcelona and Catalonia who would be shot by firing squads if Franco seized Barcelona.

As result of today's operations many military observers along the frontier predicted the war would be over within a month.

Franco now controls virtually three-fourths of continental Spain and all its islands and colonies except the tiny loyalist island of Minorca in the Balearics. He holds outright 29 provinces and the Barcelona government controls only 12—Gerona, Barcelona, Lerida, Tarragona, Castellon, Valencia, Alicante, Murcia, Almeria, Cuenca and Ciudad Real. Six others—Jean, Granada, Toledo, Madrid, Gaudalajara and Huesca—are battlegrounds.

The manifesto issued by Catalonia's anti-Fascist women said they were prepared to operate the war industries "with the help of our children, if necessary . . .

"We women ask all men to march to the front and halt the advance directed by the hangmen of Europe."

The government's newspaper La Vanguardia in Barcelona said "it is not so simple to destroy our army of 1,500,000 men, whatever the mechanical superiority of the enemy" but added:

"Someday aid will reach us from outside, but until then there is no solution."

From dawn Sunday until late at night column after column of hurriedly-mobilized workers moved out of Barcelona for the Catalonian frontiers to help build fortifications.

Franco's Form of Government In Doubt, but He'll Hold Reins

Alfonso's Son May Be King, But Only a Figurehead; Unions for Labor and Employers General's Avowed Purpose.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 27.—The precise form of government in store for Spain when and if Gen. Franco conquers the Barcelona regime remains a secret tucked away in the mind of the man more immediately concerned with his greatest military campaign.

But whatever the form, no one doubts that Franco will hold the reins and sit in the real driver's seat.

After nearly seven years as a republic, Spain even may become a monarchy again, with "his most Catholic majesty" Juan on the Bourbon throne—but as a figurehead.

(It is not considered likely that former King Alfonso ever will rule in Spain again. If a monarchy should be restored, the probability is that his 24-year-old son, Juan, the prince of the Asturias will be invited to mount the throne.)

Reserves Army Control.

Franco left open his "ultimate form of government" when promulgating a new constitution on February 2. But no one doubted that all power would remain in the hands of the former Moroccan campaigner who, in the same constitution, assured himself "supreme command of the armed forces."

Organization of the new Spain, according to the program laid before Franco's first ministry, envisions:

A labor charter, "based on the working class," and providing separate unions for workers, technicians and employers.

Municipal organization for efficient local government.

An agrarian plan for loans to farmers and "judicious" redistribution of land.

New Foreign Policy.

Franco's foreign policy would be based on "peace compatible with the dignity of a great people." His close friendship with Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini has aroused considerable speculatiaon as to his future relations with the Nazi and Fascist powers.

His financial program involves "claiming all that belongs to Spanish soil as well as treasures which have been stolen from Spain."

Franco already has given an inkling of what he may do to republican laws by revoking the right of divorce for Spaniards in insurgent Spain.

A decree issued March 3 canceled a law passed in 1932 by the Spanish Cortes (parliament) after the republican government replaced the monarchy of King Alfonso.

Seek to Regain Glory.

Franco is known to be firmly convinced that Spain is on the road to regaining the glory it had under Emperor Charles V and Philip II.

In the opinion of many foreign observers, his troubles would begin when he began to put into effect his contemplated labor charter.

He also is confronted with the colossal expense of rehabilitating the war's devastation.

And for many months after victory in the war—if he succeeds in winning it—he may be compelled to maintain rigid police control to crush the last vestiges of government resistance.

Einstein Thinks Invisible 'Field' Basis of Nature of half-way station, where the "field" is not matter, yet is not like anything known on earth.

Mercury is the closest to the sun of all planets. It is in a much stronger part of the sun's gravitational and electromagnetic field than any other planet.

This fact, says Prof. Einstein, should cause Mercury to move differently than earth and the other planets as it circles the sun. It is a fact known to astronomers that Mercury does move differently.

Mercury circles the sun in an elliptical orbit like other planets. But unlike other planets, Mercury's orbit itself is slowly revolving. The stronger "field" close to the sun is held responsible by Einstein.

Indication that his is the correct explanation is the fact that his relativity predicted Mercury's action for the first time, and that the predictions were found to agree with Mercury's movements as seen through telescopes.

The book, written for laymen, is published simultaneously in the United States, England and Holland. Coauthor is Leopold Infeld. He is 40; Einstein 59. Infeld is a member of the Institute for Advanced Study here, where Prof. Einstein has been working since leaving Germany.

The book covers the entire evolution of physics. The scientific ideas are illustrated as much as possible with railroad trains, elevators, and other commonplace objects.

One section is devoted to the discoveries which led physicists to largely discard the mechanistic view of nature which was almost universal a century ago. Relativity, the quantum theory, wave mechanics and "probability waves" are all described for laymen.

The authors say that whether the idea of matter as nature's fundamental reality will disappear and be supplanted by "the field," depends on experiments and theories not yet formulated.

"Will the further development," they write, "be along the line chosen in quantum physics, or is it more likely that new revolutionary ideas will be introduced into physics?

"Will the road of advance again make a sharp turn, as it has so often done in the past?"

Insurgents Reject 3 Appeals to Halt Bombing of Cities

Burgos, Spain (Monday), March 28 (U.P.).—Gen. Franco announced today that air raids on loyalist cities such as Barcelona would be continued so long as they remain "military objectives."

"The Generalissimo cannot economize his procedures for winning the war as a means of saving the nation," the insurgent spokesman said. "One of these procedures is the destruction of the enemy's military objectives."

The statement was issued in reply to protests from France, Britain and the Vatican following air raids on Barcelona which took a toll of more than 800 killed and 1,500 wounded.

In his reply, Franco charged that 100,000 persons were murdered by the loyalists in Madrid during the early stages of the war without a protest being made, and that hundreds of lives were lost when loyalists bombed scores of insurgent towns and cities.

The spokesman said:

"Answering Anglo-French protests, the Generalissimo declared that the nationalist aviation has taken the greatest care in the destruction of military objectives to avoid causing victims among the civilian population as a consequence of the red criminal practice of converting populated neighborhoods into arsenals for material they received from Russia and France.

Norris Says War Is More Justified Now Than in 1917

By the Associated Press.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, only remaining member of the Senate who voted against American entry into the World War, says "there is more justification for a declaration of war today than in 1917."

The veteran of 35 years on Capitol Hill made that statement in an interview to appear today in the United States News.

following the recent occupation of China.

3. Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Britain gave "evasive answers" to questions whether Britain would back France in aiding Czechoslovakia.

4. Premier Milan Hozda, of Czechoslovakia, declared the Czech frontiers were legally inviolable, "although he declared 3,000,000 citizens of German nationality were incorporated in Czechoslovakia."

5. "The Russian alliance threw France into the war of 1914."

Safeguard in Peace.

"The only effective protection for the independence and integrity of Czechoslovakia," the statement said, "consists in the maintenance of peace.

"War, on the contrary, would permit immediate invasion of Czechoslovakia by Germany while France, running the chance of sacrificing herself in north Africa and her colonies, could not protect Czechoslovakian territory without crossing and occupying Germany."

It was suggested it would be better to take the whole German-Czech problem to the League of Nations for "Article 19 of the League Covenant provides that 'treaties which have become inapplicable' and 'international conditions whose continuance might endanger the peace of the world' may be the object of new examination."

Rallies Demand Election.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, March 27. Hundreds of Sudeten German mass meetings today defiantly demanded new elections and autonomy for Czechoslovakia's 3,500,000 German minority.

Konrad Henlein, leader of the German front, remained in the backgound but his lieutenants stirred big crowds in the regions bordering Germany to a high pitch of Nazi enthusiasm.

Budapest, March 27 (AP).—Tibor Eckhardt, head of the agricultural party, while asserting that Hungary must maintain her independence and internal freedom, today advised the nation to come to terms with Germany.

The former minister to the League of Nations admonished all factions to co-operate or they would dig their own graves.

Things that wouldn't make the headlines—but which interested us no end:

The fact that attendants in Washington's museums and places otherwise of public interest don't sense the coming of spring by the trees and the air (as do you and I) but rather by the sudden pick-up in the number of tourists who come through . . . That visibility at Cambrillo National Park, or Monument, where California was first sighted, is frequently so clear that with the naked eye visitors may discern Catalina Island 100 miles away . . .

That the Forest Service is establishing wild turkeys in a number of areas where they are adapted . . . That Godfrey V. Wickward, executive assistant to A. F. G. E. President Stengle, must go to the hospital for an operation tomorrow (speedy recovery is hoped for) . . . That Miss Florence E. Marshall, a secretary in the office of the general counsel, Bureau of Internal Revenue, has written another book, "Silence Is Yellow" . . . Her first book, "Are You Awake?" appeared in the summer of 1936 . . . The current book from her pen is peace conscious . . . We hear from her:

"Since I believe the rapier of ridicule may penetrate where the broadsword of denunciation may fail to enter, I have written these rhymes making fun of different angles of war and then proving my point by the footnotes of those who have made a study of it . . ." Among those who have contributed footnotes are Mrs. Roosevelt, Judge Florence Allen, Arthur Brisbane, Bruce Barton, A. A. Milne, a member of the Canadian Parliament; Kagawa, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Gen. Smedley Butler and others. . .

That there is in existence an actual photograph of the Battle of Wounded Knee, in which the Seventh United States Cavalry wiped out a band of Sioux Indians in South Dakota and over which still hangs a cloud . . . The picture is in possession of Delancey Gill, who was for many years associated with the Office of Indian Affairs . . That the arguments already have begun about the selection of the projected civil service administrator, many fearing that he will be a long-haired college professor heavy with theories but minus on the end of actual personnel experience . . . That he probably would have some ten academic degrees and insist that even the custodial workers have Phi Beta Kappa keys . . . It has been too much that way all along . . .

That the chief credit for the fight on behalf of night school people who want to use their hard-acquired education to advance themselves in the service should go to Dean John Fitzpatrick, of Columbus University Law School and the A. F. G. E. . . . We hear that the SEC is also a stickler for the legal lights who come from the "accredited" schools of the law . . . But the Solicitor's Office in Agriculture takes the prize—and you name the prize . . .

That Herman Felter, a contributor to the In-Com-Co (ICC employe journal), has discovered for the world an interesting note on ten septillion dollars ($10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000) . . . More remarkably, he brings to light an interesting story on a man who once became involved with that princely sum, telling it in this wise:

In 1340 Edward III of England was in hard financial straits, as sometimes happens even with monarchs. To relieve his royal impecuniosity an appeal was made to the Peruzzi banking house of Florence, Italy, for a loan of what is the equivalent of $12,000,000. In due course, the bankers made request for payment, but the king pleaded poverty and an extension was granted. Further extensions and dunning brought no better results, and finally a proclamation was issued repudiating the debt on the theory, apparently, that a king could do no wrong.

Since then every ten years demand has been made upon the sovereign for payment but without avail. In 1901 a London economist or financial wizard calculated that the debt, with interest at a reasonable rate, compounded annually, then amounted to the staggering stupendous sum of $10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 . . . On the same basis conjure up what the present British debt to Uncle Sam will amount to in the year of grace 2500!"

But they'll probably compromise in the meantime, paying us off in prune juice or ham actors.

The second performance of the Union Playhouse will be presented tomorrow evening at the Department of Commerce Auditorium under auspices of the Commerce Branch of Local 2, N. F. F. E. In the program are two films titled: "Commerce Around a Cup of Coffee," and "Speckled Beauties." The show is free to members and their friends. Lee H. Shugar is the director. . . . The exhibition by the Collectors' Club, which has been held all this month in the National Museum, will be brought to a close Thursday. . . . The number of Federal employes who have viewed the displays has been considerable. . . . Collectors participating have included those from the Postoffice, Interior, Patents, Veterans' Administration, Treasury, practically all of them. . . . No prizes can be announced, since the Government won't permit competitions in a Federal structure. . . . Isaac Gregg, of the Postoffice Department press bureau, has returned to work after an extended illness; glad to see him back. . . .

One of the old-timers comes in to confound us with this: Why are those massive gate pillars standing by the White House, Pennsylvania avenue side, without any gates on them? Having missed on the first, second and third guesses, we were informed by him as follows:

The gates were placed there during the Administration of President Hayes. During the Administration of President Taft, a request was made for the gates to be used at some historical event in Ohio, Hayes' native State. The Congress authorized the removal. But when the workmen went there to take the relic away, it was discovered that the authorization covered only the gates, and not the heavy pillars. So they carried the gates away, leaving the pillars as an enigma, which, we hope, is appropriately cleared up.

Diagnosis Drive Opens Wednesday

The early diagnosis campaign of the District Tuberculosis Association, extending through April and May, will be launched at a public conference of health and welfare representatives at 12:30 p. m. Wednesday in the University Women's Club, 1634 I street northwest.

Dr. Albert E. Russell, assistant surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, will make the first official presentation of the tuberculosis recommendations in the recent health survey of Washington.

Other brief addresses will be by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board of education; Dr. James G. Townsend, president of the Tuberculosis Association, and Dr. Numa P. G. Adams, dean of the Howard University School of Medicine.

Soviet Plane Built Here Carries 7 Machine Guns

Farmingdale, N. Y., March 27 (U.P.). The Soviet government accepted for delivery today two airplanes, one of which was described as the deadliest aerial weapon ever devised. The planes, built by the Seversky Aircraft Corporatoin for $780,000, will be crated and shipped to Russia, where Soviet technicians will reproduce them.

The plane said to be the world's most formidable is a "convoy fighter" designed to carry seven machine guns and 600 pounds of aerial demolition bombs.

Congress Gets Data on Power Rates Survey

Queens Borough Pays Highest Tariff on 250 Kilowatts.

The Federal Power Commission has reported to Congress that there were wide differences in cost of household electricity in various cities in 1936.

The widest difference was between cost for 250 kilowatt-hours in a month in Tacoma, Wash., where customers paid the municipal plant $3.62 and the Borough of Queens, New York City, where customers paid $13.75 to a private company for the same amount.

The charge in the District for that amount is $5.10. Prior to February 1 the charge here was $5.65, before lower rates ordered by the District Public Utilities Commission went into effect.

The 250-kilowatt-hours is the amount customarily used in residences having electric cooking as well as lighting, small appliances and refrigeration.

The report covered 191 cities of 50,000 population or more and included approximately one-half of all residential users of electricity in the country. There were decreases in rates in 101 of the cities, and increases in only 6.

These residential rate reductions were made by 78, or 51 per cent of the 153 utility companies serving the cities. Seventeen of the cities included were by publicly owned plants, 183 by private utilities.

For 100 kilowatt hours per month, the typical consumption in the vast majority of homes which have only refrigeration in addition to lighting and small appliances, the greatest difference in cost was between Tacoma, Wash., which paid $2.12, and Tampa, Fla., which paid $6.25.

Kickback From Depression.

The sustained decline in President Roosevelt's popularity, as measured by the American Institute of Public Opinion, is undoubtedly related to the present wave of depression. No administration elected on a recovery platform can expect to retain the support of a large majority of the people in the face of a drastic slump extending over nine months. Even if the President could prove that present conditions are not primarily a result of his policies, increased unemployment and gloom would nevertheless react against him.

In one respect the President may find some comfort in the poll. For the drop in his popularity is small compared with the precipitous decline of industrial production, employment and pay rolls. From August, 1937, to last January the Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production slid from 115 to 79. The present downward trend of public support for the New Deal did not set in until October. At that time Mr. Roosevelt had 63.4 per cent of the people with him. Now, it appears, he has 58.5 per cent.

On the other hand, there is usually a lag between a decline in business and public reaction to it. In other words, if the depression continues, the Administration may expect further inroads upon its popularity. Indeed, a rather sharp period of recovery would doubtless be essential to swing the trend of its fortunes upward again.

President Roosevelt likes to ascribe blame for present conditions to an unnamed "selfish few." But he is not in a position to escape the impact of resentment arising out of shrinking pay rolls and increasing demands for relief. When business and industry were expanding their activities the President seldom lost an opportunity to claim credit for the progress that was being made. He gave the country assurance that: "We planned it that way." It is a lame argument now to say that a "selfish few" came along and upset the Administration's prosperity plans.

In part this waning of the President's popularity might have been avoided by prompt action to arrest the tide of depression. But eight months after the slump began Congress is still discussing relief from oppressive taxes. The railroads are in a desperate plight. Utilities are unable to go ahead with urgently needed expansion programs. And business in general is in a state of confusion as to the Administration's policies.

The enactment of a constructive housing measure is not enough to offset these negative factors. Failure of the New Deal to grapple realistically with the sharpest depression in recent years has naturally accentuated the critical attitude. If the Administration is to reverse that trend before the 1938 Congressional elections, there is much to be done.

Relief And Insurance.

Reports from New York City indicate that during the past two months the home relief burden has been reduced by less than 3 per cent as a result of the distribution of unemployment insurance benefits. With 183,000 persons on the city's relief rolls, only 3,500 persons have been dropped because they were in receipt of insurance benefits. In 1,500 other cases insurance payments have had to be supplemented by home relief allowances because they were inadequate to meet family needs.

This record is not surprising and should not be disappointing in view of the adverse conditions prevailing when the unemployment insurance system was inaugurated. As a result of widespread and chronic unemployment, few of the employables now on relief rolls have had opportunity to qualify for the receipt of insurance benefits. The system is designed to meet the needs of the unemployed in normally prosperous times when jobs are available after a limited waiting period. It was never intended to take the place of relief made necessary by prolonged unemployment due to industrial depression.

Unemployment insurance in New York City and elsewhere is, however, indirectly relieving the strain upon relief funds by providing temporary aid to those who have recently lost their jobs, and in the absence of benefits would have had to apply at once for relief. Moreover, the morale of these insured persons has undoubtedly been greatly improved because they are drawing payments for which their previous labor has made them eligible.

While insurance and relief systems should be closely integrated so that the insured who have exhausted their benefits and cannot find a job may be given proper relief, it is important to maintain the distinction between insurance payments which are made as a matter of right, regardless of the recipient's need, and the relief system which pays in accordance with the needs of the destitute individual and his dependents.

The Test On Reorganization.

The vote in the Senate today to recommit the reorganization bill will be a decisive test of the opposition's strength. If the motion is defeated, the last obstacle to Senate approval of the measure will have been removed. If, on the other hand, the motion should prevail, enactment of legislation to reorganize the executive branch of the Government would be definitely out of the question at this session of Congress and probably for a long time to come.

Hence, the Senate is confronted by the very difficult task of deciding what is to be the fate of the Administration's reorganization program. It is the most important issue that has been raised in a long time, excepting the proposal to increase the membership of the Supreme Court. In the latter controversy, however, the issues were clear-cut. It was comparatively easy to weigh the merits of the arguments for and against the proposed changes in the Court. But it is far from easy to take a decisive stand for or against a many-sided omnibus measure like the Byrnes reorganization bill.

There is general agreement that a thorough overhauling of the administrative machinery of the Federal Government is urgently needed. Repeated efforts have been made, in fact, to arouse public interest in plans for bringing order into the rather chaotic pattern of the existing executive setup. Such plans were seriously considered during the Hoover Administration, but without result. The present reorganization program simply represents another attempt at reform; it is neither partisan in origin nor sinister in purpose.

As a rule, a reorganization program ought to stand or fall strictly on its merits. However, it is extremely difficult for the Senate to analyze an omnibus measure which, in addition to empowering the President to combine, consolidate and abolish executive bureaus and agencies, provides for far-reaching changes in the civil service and in the accounting and auditing systems of the Government. Many Senators who heartily indorse one section of the bill may object strongly to other parts of it. Under such cimcumstances, voting becomes a process of compromising.

It is evident that any reorganization plan to be effective must vest large discretionary powers in the hands of the President. The Brownlow Committee, indeed, recommended much greater powers than those that would be conferred by the revised Byrnes bill, and it made out a strong case in theory for its proposals. The alarmist outcries against the bill, the charges that it is a plot to give the President dictatorial powers are of course absurd. The experts who directed the study and made the report which constitutes a basis for the proposed legislation are men whose ability and disinterestedness are well known and whose honesty of intention is beyond question. One may not agree with all the committee's recommendations, but there is nothing in them which involves an overthrow of our political institutions or endangers the Constitution.

Since the first reorganization bill was introduced a year ago, however, there has been a tremendous change in the attitude of Congress toward any proposals that would give added powers to the President. A new spirit of criticism is abroad in the land and in the halls of Congress, in marked contrast to the docility of former years when the President's desires were commands to be transformed into law. The controversy over the Supreme Court undoubtedly played a great part in bringing about this change.

Defenders of the Constitution ought to be heaving sighs of relief in face of current evidence that Congress is becoming aware of its responsibilities and scrutinizing proposals carrying the Administration's indorsement.

Today the personality of the President, rather than the impersonal issues raised by the reorganization program has become a dominant factor in determining the fate of the Byrnes bill. A vote for reorganization is, in effect, a vote of confidence in the President's ability to exercise wisely the great powers he must have if there is to be any reorganization worthy of the name. To those who have any doubts on that score, the proposed reorganization plan will be unacceptable regardless of its objective value in their eyes.

Mere Amateurs.

Down in Miami Beach on April 13 they are going to hold the ninth annual "Liars' Night" with "distinguished liars" from all parts of the country on hand to participate.

Clearly the soul of Baron Munchausen and other tellers of tall tales marches on. But it is fair to say that the yarns that will be told in the Florida city when the self-proclaimed fabricators and prevaricators gather in competition will, at best, be puny, amateur offerings.

In "lying" they will jest. But there are others in the world, grim, hard-bitten men, who do not jest when they mock at truth. On the contrary, in many parts of the world the lie has been transformed into a bulwark of government, an instrument of policy.

Everywhere in the regimented nations propaganda fabricated from half-truths is served up to the people and, wherever possible, is exported to surrounding lands. For the dictators the telling of tall tales is no pastime; it is part of their business. Experts in this curious art do not have to conjure up conventions to exhibit their skill. They are in line for places in the ministry of propaganda or enlightenment or whatever it may be called. Instead of being an amateurish sport in totalitarian lands, deft distortion of the truth becomes a vital profession.

If the amusing assemblages of American liars are to be saved from unfair competition, therefore, it may be necessary to give them the status of amateurs and strictly bar the participation of professionals.

Toward Fascism In Japan.

Before it adjourned on Saturday the Japanese Parliament gave way on all major counts to the far-reaching demands made upon it by the army-dominated Konoye government. Of the 86 bills sponsored by the cabinet 76 were approved, among them the mobilization bill, which gives the government power to draft Japan's manpower and economic resources for the duration of the war. The bill nationalizing the electric industry, at present in private hands, also passed.

To the credit of many in the Diet it must be said that they fought long and hard to prevent the transformation of the island empire into an Asiatic counterpart of Germany and Italy. While giving their full support to Japan's war effort, they opposed that drastic regimentation of commerce, industry and labor for which the army radicals have long been clamoring.

But the odds were overwhelming against those seeking to preserve even a modicum of freedom in the economic sphere. The undeclared war on China is now in its ninth month. There is every indication that it will last for a good while longer. But with each passing day the financial burden grows. This is revealed in the fact that one-half of Japan's $833,000,000 budget just approved is earmarked for ordinary military and naval purposes. In addition there is a supplementary budget of $1,400,000,000 for the expenses of the war in China. Under the circumstances, therefore, it was inevitable that the drive to place the economic life of Japan increasingly in the hands of the government proved to be irresistible.

Present developments in Japan are, in this particular, grimly ironic. Japanese businessmen and industrialists and their political spokesmen have always tacitly or actively favored the army's expansionist policies on the mainland of Asia. They saw certain benefits for themselves in this imperialistic movement. At the same time, however, they have stoutly opposed the concurrent program of national socialism which powerful elements in the fighting services have regarded as the natural corollary to the expansionist program.

Having had their way in the field of foreign policy, the army radicals have now also won out in the domestic sphere. But this victory at home occurs at a moment when, on the mainland, the situation facing the Japanese militarists is none too rosy. Chinese resistance is increasing rather than diminishing and new Japanese military triumphs are few and far between. In transforming Japan along fascistic lines, the militarists hope to make an expanding war effort possible. But it remains to be seen whether their calculations in this respect will not be as far afield as were their previous forecasts regarding the brevity of the Chinese war.

Harmony For Eire?

History is full of instances of soldiers, writers, orators and lawyers who have made their profession the stepping stone to political power. But since David, the "sweet singer of Israel," few musicians have found their way to the throne or its modern equivalent.

There was Paderewski, of course. He did nobly, for a time, as premier of Poland, after a very notable career as one of the world's outstanding pianists. His case has been the exception proving the rule. Now, however, he may have a successor. John McCormack, the famous tenor, has let it be known that he might consider running for President of Eire.

A singer as chief executive at Dublin offers interesting possibilities. Able to reach the high C's at will, such a man might find it possible to dispense with a navy. Presidential messages put to song could easily become an improvement over the pedestrian outpourings of less-gifted individuals. And, anyway, if the music-makers, as O'Shaughnessy pointed out long ago, are in fact the "movers and shakers" of the world, no harm would be done by encouraging them to do their moving and shaking in political office.

It would seem that the only young woman in the country who hasn't tried to secure the role of Scarlett O'Hara in the forthcoming (?) motion picture, "Gone with the Wind," is Margaret Mitchell.

A woman listening at a radio broadcast featuring a comedian several evenings ago laughed herself to death. A sense of humor would have saved her life.

You have reason to feel complimented when some one imitates you. No one ever tried to counterfeit a penny.

The thing to take for spring fever is to take it easy.

Filipino's Reply.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: W. Campbell Armstrong in a letter to The Post of March 20 claimed that the Filipinos are ungrateful and have treated the Americans shamefully. No Filipino of sound mind will deny the benefits we have received from the United States and we appreciated them. I challenge Mr. Armstrong to cite a case or cases in which the Americans were mistreated or came out second-best in any bargain with the Filipinos. Does he call it shameful to give to the Americans the best, the choicest and the most lucrative jobs; to give the best mining concessions; to give them opportunity to rise socially and economically; to give them rights to exploit us. Is that shameful?

It is naive for Mr. Armstrong to believe. It is generally agreed that the act was the result of log rolling by Congress in which the South, the sugar beet interests; California labor, the dairy industry; Cuban sugar interests participated.

Our free trade with the United States was forced upon us not for our own benefit but for the American people. In 1909 we vehemently opposed such an arrangement, but we were disregarded because we were then useful. Now that we have no use we are to blame.

Americans were not invited to come to the Philippines. The intrusion was resented by us. After helping defeat the Spanish we asked the Americans to withdraw, and what did we get? We got kicked on the pants and when we resisted we were slaughtered and butchered.

Hunger And Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Frequently Germany is excused for taking Austria on the grounds, that having been stripped of her wealth and colonies, she has nothing to lose. Because I am a teacher of children, I easily see that rules which apply to a nation necessarily apply to individuals.

For instance, a few weeks ago three Negro men struck a very distinguished white gentleman and relieved him of his money and valuables. Several days later it was suggested in some newspapers that, should these bandits be caught, they should be given the maximum penalty. Indeed one paper even suggested the death penalty for armed bandits.

Permit me to say that I, too, have had my purse snatched and I was not only angry but frightened, yet I did not call the police because I wondered if this theft is necessary. You may say that no theft is necessary, that no honorable man will steal under any circumstances, and then I would like to ask you this question, "Can honor continue when one's child is starving?"

Believe me when I say, when one of my little pupils tore his trousers yesterday, I noticed the lack of underwear. I later discovered his father is unemployed and he has had no underclothing this entire winter. The entire family is destitute and there has been trouble about getting on relief.

I am sorry that the distinguished gentleman lost his valuables but I am more sorry that a man of my race committed the crime. I believe in punishment for any one who breaks our laws but I know that some men steal that their children may live. The Negro is the last to be hired and the first to be fired. Too often he is placed on relief and then what becomes of his manhood? He can tolerate his crowded quarters, but when his children cry for food, can he remain a man? No, he becomes a beast, he has been stripped of his moral possessions. He may be killed as he steals, but then like Germany, he has nothing to lose.

Immigrants And Jobs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have greatest sympathy for the people, especially the Jews, in Austria and Germany. But who is going to give them work if they come over here? Is not the unemployment situation great enough, without getting more people over here and making it still greater?

At several places I have offered to work a week without pay just to get a chance to get a position. I have been refused each time. I tried to get a filling station attendant job, but was told I had to have a college education. With such qualifications required can foreigners expect to get a job?

If the United States expects them to get jobs, then for heaven's sake, some one give me a job.

Urges Spring House Cleaning.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If one is to draw a conclusion from an able article in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post relative to political conditions in Pennsylvania, the Democratic Party, as well as the Republican, is ripe for a thorough house cleaning.

Spring is quite the proper time for scouring. Many of our so-called princes of political purity have clearly demonstrated their inability to govern and should be supplanted by men who are motivated by higher impulses than self-seeking and mad ambition.

Conditions today are attributable, in a great measure, at least, to the "do nothing" policy of an administration, during the series of sit-down strikes, when our industrial machinery was all but wrecked. In an effort to hold the labor vote, the lawmakers fiddled futilely and furtively while the conflagration spread.

If the pastime of "playing politics" was abandoned at least until the country experienced some degree of recovery, a national case of "jitters" might be routed.

"The Luxury Of Democracy."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am still tingling with enthusiasm after the perusal of a great speech. And strange to say, I wish to call its author's attention to it, for it was delivered in the Senate 20 years ago today.

We were then at the turning point of the World War.

I found it in book form, "American Problems." And alas! The distinguished Senator from Idaho whose vision was so clear at the time, seems now to be giving aid and comfort to the enemy. He has drifted away from his moorings.

I commend to the Senator's attention the chapter of his own speech on "The Issues of the War." It is magnificent, and the issues are practically the same.

Two megalomaniacs, their hands red with human blood and banking on their supreme nuisance value make threatening passes with lighted torches at a huge powder magazine.

The democratic leaders of Europe go into a huddle, terrified.

Jerking at his coat tails and annoying him, is a voluble and hydra-headed electorate bent on money making, on pleasure, sports, luxury and the needless complexities of a "modern" civilization—God save the mark! Most of them are incapable of analyzing the recent lessons of history, most of them are isolationists at all costs, and each declaims to high heaven against some particular phobia of negligible importance.

To this heterogeneous mass the fates have entrusted the costly luxury of democracy to play with.

Ruinous filibusters for the sake of a technicality of a demonstrated secondary value. Titanic struggles between organized labor and capital, or even factional disputes with the public holding the bag.

"Totalitarian states act while Democratic states talk."

H. DE JERSEY.
Washington, March 18.

Harry Wardman.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The late Harry Wardman probably created more visible wealth for Washington than any man who ever lived here. He built 6 hotels, 400 apartment houses, office buildings, etc., and 9,000 dwellings, to which should be added the British Embassy and other public buildings. The value of these buildings is over $100,000,000.

He started and encouraged many young men to wealth and success. I wish to pay tribute to his memory as a man of dauntless nerve, great vision and splendid ability. If we had more citizens of his type we would soon have a city of 2,000,000 citizens. He was my benefactor. May he rest in peace.

HOUSTON R. HARPER.

In Reply to Mr. Barefoot

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The review of "The Final Choice" by T. A. B. Barefoot in The Post on March 21, calls for a reply. We admit that there are many uncertainties in the realm of action in foreign affairs. Your reviewer admits none. He knows it all, with an arrogance rarely seen in this field. To him the idea that Japan, for example, would do something more than lie down if her oil supply were shut off is "folly." There is no basis for calling it that. The British did not think Italy's threat to fight in 1935, if oil sanctions were imposed, was folly.

He claims that we say the economic need has no place in the action of the aggressor nations. The whole argument in the book for the drastic proposals for a working international economic order not only deny his statement but also make the economic disorder of an uncontrollable arms boom the cause for consideration of drastic changes. Apparently your reviewer considers that the rejection of the "have and have not" theory includes also a rejection of the bona fide economic difficulties of the aggressive nations.

By what dispensation does your reviewer assume the right to call "patently insincere" the following explanation of the effect of the neutrality law on our foreign policy?

(P. 199) "The legislation simply prevents America's drifting or fumbling into war. It leaves the field entirely free for the believers in international co-operation to convince the people of the Nation that any particular war merits our participation. It leaves them free to convince the people that our going into a war will actually save democracy and help establish peace. It does not give them the headstart in this campaign of education which they would have if the President were free to choose sides or to undertake all the old quarrels all over again, or if the bankers were left free to loan billions to the belligerents. The legislation does not prevent American participation in foreign wars. It delays it."

And calling everybody a "pacifist" who will fight for the country but who will not move our borders and armies to the Danube by tomorrow at 1 o'clock is a use of the word which ought, in respect to Mr. Webster et al, be patented for the exclusive use of Mr. Barefoot. Yours,

STEPHEN RAUSHENBUSH,
JOAN RAUSHENBUSH.

The Post Impressionist

Gallatin Street.

GALLATIN STREET, relic of old New Orleans' notorious district, which figures prominently in Miss Bette Davis' portrayal of "Jezebel," was the reservoir of crime which labeled New Orleans "the most wicked city in the United States." The police records of that period teem with deeds of bloodshed and unsolved mysteries which were part of the momentous doings on that street. Today no spot could be more quiet. Now no howl of pain, no woman's shriek of terror disturbs its slumberous houses. Almost like Babylon of old as Jeremiah envisioned it in its downfall, it has become "an astonishment and a hissing without an inhabitant."

* * *

An old inhabitant of New Orleans, who remembers when it was the most talked of street in the city, now could scarcely find a dweller in the vicinity who could point the place out to him.

"Where," he might ask of a man leaning against a lamp post at the corner of Decatur and Ursuline streets, "where is Gallatin street in this neighborhood?"

"Gallatin street!" would come the answer in broken French, "I never heard of it. This is Ursuline street."

Yet two squares up toward the Mississippi River—only 50 paces farther—the street that was not a street ends abruptly against the yellow wall of the old United States Mint, fronting the lower end of the site of the famous French Market, which was demolished during the lifetime of Senator Long.

A visitor to Gallatin street a few years ago saw no sign of life, but only dull, faded houses of brick, three stories high, while unused banquettes (as the Creoles called the sidewalks) lay baking in the sun and giving forth miasma.

On closer observation, he would see poking from dingy galleries of the once crime-infested houses, simple poles for clothes lines—the only indication of humanity. But still there hung about the street something to suggest the days when men gave up the ghost in the shadow of the old Green Tree Inn. Were these clothes poles, with pulleys attached, leaning drunkenly out of the shabby windows, and flaunting a torn shirt or two, or were they gibbets from which suspended some wretches strung up in their shrouds?

The visitor falls so deeply into this illusion, that upon approaching one of the tallest and most dismal of the houses, and hearing a woman weeping in a dark recess aloft—an Italian, he judges, from the few words spoken—he feels suddenly the presence of the hundreds of women who shed their tears upon that street. There is another sound coming from the only open doorway visible. It is a dull, monotonous hammering, such as a condemned prisoner hears, the night before his execution when the scaffold is being erected. What does it matter if closer examination prove that the noise comes from a furniture establishment?

Crossing Hospital street, at the intersection of Gallatin street, the visitor sees long-neglected habitations, showing their natural brick, set off by grinning mortar between. No friendly "For Rent" sign decorates these vacant houses. The presence of a single lamp post in the middle of the block stands out, like one of the Eumenidae, to remind him of the sinister past, when its feeble, flickering gaslight, swarming with the pests of the sultry New Orleans night gave shadowy shape to the forms drifting up and down the narrow street. Perhaps on this very spot stood the Green Tree Inn itself.

Small remnants of latticework still cling desperately to the galleries as evidence of the atmosphere of old Venice, once present. From a window, hanging strangely in contrast to the drab surroundings, is a faded carpet, once as gay as any silk or velvet that hung from the palace windows of the Doges of Venice.

Before the visitor can end his walk, half a dozen dogs come out to haunt the street in vain search for offal; two or three children mysteriously appear from doorways to excavate the gutter. One of the houses has a door ajar, revealing a ghastly perspective of darkness. A patch of yellow cloth hangs from the window of this house, and bears the grim warning—"Smallpox."

* * *

This is Gallatin street as it appeared a few years ago. In the days of "Jezebel," the street was noisy with gross revelry, and with the echoes of strife and desperate combat. Just beyond it were the wharves of the Mississippi, whose muddy waters rarely surrendered the treasure of departed lives.

RICHARD X. EVANS.

Gas Tax Birthday.

On February 25, 1919, the first gasoline tax law in the United States went into effect in Oregon. The rate was 1 cent a gallon. In 1920, the first full year of gas-tax collection brought in $1,363,902, the tax had spread to five States. Today every State has a gasoline tax and there is a Federal tax besides. In 1937 State and Federal gasoline taxes yielded $972,325,000, an average of $32.79 per vehicle. This is double the average impost of 1929.

In these 19 years some $7,000,000,000 has been collected from American motorists.

If all of it had been applied to construction and maintenance of highways, the Nation might have a highway system to be proud of. Since this is a tax based not on ability to pay, but on benefits received, its use for any other purpose than highways cannot be justified, and gas-tax diversion is morally no better than theft of trust funds.

Fair Enough

Beck's Formula.

San Francisco.

IT WILL COME under the heading of new business to consider labor organization as a manifestation of the Fascist spirit, for the alarmist accusation commonly points the finger in the opposite direction. But under fascism the unions are supposed to be patriotic organizations with a mission to repel the revolutionary left by co-operating with business under the discipline of the State and we are beginning to find right-wing labor bosses here who have mixed purposes.

PEGLER.

Mr. Dave Beck, the head man of the Teamsters Union on the Pacific Coast, is a unioneer of the patriotic type. He had two years of high school, went to the war as an aviation mechanic, and is proud to have held exalted office in the Elks. He hates and baits Communists with Rotarian fervor, and proclaims his purpose to co-operate with business so that capital may make a dollar, too.

So far, all right, but up in Seattle, where Mr. Beck formerly was absolute boss, this co-operation took an unexpected turn. He co-operated with capital, and business suddenly began to co-operate back with the result that businessmen became union organizations, compelling their men to join unions lest their stores and plants be embargoed for maintaining the open shop.

• • • •

THIS BROUGHT unions and businessmen into a very cozy relationship under the government of a city administration which was elected and controlled by Mr. Beck. Not all business, of course, but enough of business to run things in co-operation with the blue-eyed patriotic Elk. The duce pressed the advantage to regulate competition and maintain prices at a high level through a method amounting to an informal licensing system similar in effect to that which is used in Fascist Italy. A businessman who plays ball with a union under a dictatorship naturally expects the union to play ball with him. Mr. Beck did not do these things officially. They were done by businessmen who, by yielding to the demands of labor, had become fairhaired boys of the regime and junior partners in power.

Too much competition meant close pricing and price cutting, and the unions held a regulatory authority in their power to boycott and picket any business which intruded on the zone or under-cut the prices of a house in good standing.

Mr. Beck is as frank as a child in his assertion and exercise of the right and power to "crucify" any business: "Crucify" is his own word for the operation. Sometimes he finds it necessary to do this to an industry which is trying hard to co-operate but can't for reasons beyond its control. He boasts that he "crucified" the brewers of California in the Northwest because the brewery workers in California would not surrender to his union of teamsters the brewery truckmen who belonged to the brewery workers union by prior right. It is true that these men are teamsters, but it is also true that brewery workers are older than the teamsters and held jurisdiction over the brewery truckmen from the start. The American Federation of Labor repeatedly awarded Mr. Beck jurisdiction the brewery workers refused to yield, and Mr. Beck now boasts that the blameless brewery firms of California are embargoed in the important Northwestern field of inter-State commerce by his command.

• • • •

TO BE SURE, this does not reveal the spirit of co-operation, but Mr. Beck also boasts that in his own judgment he co-operated with the local breweries by taking them over and operating them entirely. He is inclined to think that this was rather patriotic and constructive of him to overlook the assumption of an authority not ordinarily conceded to any power, including the Government.

Now, in California, Mr. Beck is eager to co-operate with the trucking firms. His primary purpose is to make jobs for teamsters, but the effect of his ultimatum against the California farmers would be to banish them from their own roads in their own State. Mr. Beck has decreed that no farmer may haul store goods back from the city to the rural districts for his neighbor or anyone except himself. The neighbor or other person must pay a trucking company to do this hauling even though many farm trucks ride back empty from the market. The trucking firm will hire teamsters and will be very co-operative with Mr. Beck in return for the chance to make a dollar.

There remains a small matter of enforcement of this decree issued to the California farmers by a resident of the State of Washington. The exact methods of enforcement have not been determined, but if you were a farmer how would you like to find sand in your gears or razor cuts in your tires or have an accident and break a leg? Mr. Beck, of course, is innocent of such thoughts, but teamsters are an abrupt and rugged lot and an executive cannot be held strictly accountable for the impulsive acts of individuals, can he?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Conference Of War Lords.

(Hitler, Goering, Mussolini, Napoleon, Franco and Attila are assembled in one room and are watching one another very suspiciously.)

Napoleon (to Attila).—I feel awfully uncomfortable in this crowd.

Attila (wincing)—It's too tough for me, too. Let's go outside where the air is fresher. What's been going on, anyhow?

Napoleon—Same old story, war, I suppose but in my time we at least used to wash the blood off our hands.

Hitler (to Napoleon)—Good morning. You know me, of course?

Napoleon—I'm sorry, but I've never had the displeasure.

Hitler—My name is Hitler—Adolf Hitler. I've always been a great admirer of yours. I'm really taking up things where you left off. Like you, I get things done! I get what I want. You and I have much in common.

Napoleon—You're somewhat noisier, if I may say so.

Hitler (ignoring the slur)—You had the world at your feet, Napoleon, and so shall I.

Napoleon—If so, the chiropodists will not prove as particular as they used to be.

Napoleon—Oh, yes, the public lecturer.

Mussolini (hurt)—No, no. I'm the head of all Italy, restorer of the Roman legions, conqueror of Ethiopia.

Goering—Won't somebody introduce me?

Franco—And me, too?

Napoleon—Who's the medal salesman?

Attila—He don't sell 'em; I understand they're his personal collection.

Hitler (to Napoleon)—By the way, would you like to meet General Franco of Spain?

Napoleon—Not after those last Barcelona bombings.

Attila—We used to have our ruthless moments, but we didn't go out of our way to murder babies.

Napoleon—Who was that fellow I saw standing outside with a bomb in one hand and an apology in the other, smiling from ear to ear?

Hitler—It must have been a Japanese general. Shall I bring him in?

Hitler (getting a little peeved)—After all, you boys were no angels. You ran up pretty high slaughter records.

Napoleon—I always called war by its right name and never sacked a city on the ground that I was a brother and a pal.

Attila (to Hitler)—Don't stare at me. I admit I was a barbarian, but I would qualify only as an old-fashioned pussyfooter by modern standards.

Hitler, Goering, Mussolini and Franco—We might as well get out of here. They just don't seem to understand us.

(They go.)

Attila—You don't seem so tough any more, either.

Napoleon—How did we ever get back into this wild, irresponsible, inhuman and mad world, anyhow?

Attila—It must have been something we ate!

Spanish Background

Former U. S. Ambassador At Madrid Traces Leftist Rise.

By Irwin Laughlin.

Special Correspondent to The Post.

In the following article, adapted by Mr. Laughlin from a recent address, our former Ambassador at Madrid examines certain underlying factors in the Spanish civil war.

AT THE OUTSET I want to make it clear that what I am about to say is not meant as a partisan political exposition either for or against one or the other of the warring sides in the Spanish peninsula. The nature of the subject I have to treat requires strong statements—they might be far stronger and still be understated—but I make them conscientiously. I am concerned with Spain only incidentally as an example, my thesis being the relations between religion and civil government with the text of Spain since the revolution of 1931.

Why are religious influences in these times failing to affect the conduct of peoples and of governments as those influences used to do in times past when they were fundamental in supplying principles and a point of departure for action; in helping to guide policy; to control behavior; to justify opinions? They were a refuge to which people could return for reflection and correction; they could clarify confused thought and restore confidence. Now it seems as though nobody thinks of these things. They run inconsequently here and there without any signposts to direct their movements, or bolt down the first by-path that seems to promise the goal of self-interest.

THE FALL of the Spanish throne had been preceded by a long period of dissatisfaction with the monarchical regime, during which the party working for the establishment of a republic used every weapon that came to hand. Though many of them were not irreligious, all of them might as well have been the enemies of religion that so many of them were, for one of the chief methods of attack took the form of anti-clericalism which, when the republican movement succeeded, had so sapped popular confidence in the church as an institution that the professional atheists, both native and imported, were able to wreak their will on a people in the flux of reorganization who could not defend themselves.

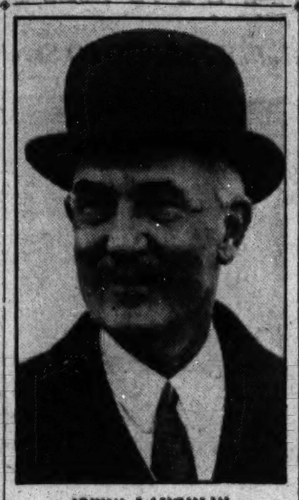
Long before the monarchy fell the agents of the only state that follows a systematic foreign policy of subversion had been busily at work, not only in the movement to wreck the monarchy, but in preparing the crash of the republic that was to follow it; and they had found to help them willing knaves and fools of all classes in the country. At my first interview, a few days after the proclamation of the republic, with its then provisional president I took occasion to remind him and to warn him of this foreign invasion and its purpose.

The Spanish revolution was largely brought about by the operation of antireligious influences. There were, it is true, other important factors on which I do not touch because I am concerned with the subject of religious influences and not politics, and if the new republic had followed a straight course of building up a new state which should be free from abuse and faults of the past, they might well have succeeded in the gradual formation of an admirable and durable polity. Unfortunately the character of most of the leaders was such as to foredoom this result to failure.

Moderate Influences Overcome By Communists.

A FEW were well intentioned, but not forceful enough to prevail against the evil elements. They exercised a slightly moderating influence at first, but it did not last long and they have been submerged by the communistic current and swept away. The moving forces were not merely anticlerical; they were antireligious.

Though announcing the formation of a state of "workers," as they described it, with explicit promises of freedom of religious worship, they nevertheless began by a fierce and brutal persecution of the established church, which they promptly disestablished and have ever since been trying to destroy. They had proclaimed a state of governmental tolerance of all creeds, but as none save that of Rome was important enough to notice, they set themselves to the accomplishment of its complete destruction on various pretexts, and there can be no doubt at all, given the antireligious bias of most of even the best of them, that the fanatical element intended to give short shrift to all religious denominations when they had disposed of the Catholics.



IRWIN LAUGHLIN.

The Spanish people had been brought up in church and state and accustomed for many centuries to the church as a social habit inseparable from the civil administration—even those amongst them who were not good churchmen accepted its social influence as a part of their daily life. They could not understand the meaning or the implications of a separation of church and state, and they became more and more bewildered.

Communism Rooted In General Confusion.

ON THIS state of mind the poison of communism, already for a long time widespread, took a renewed hold. At the beginning of the republic it had to work more or less under control, but with the elections of February, 1936, in which the left wing defeated the more moderate elements, whose influence up to that time had been steadily increasing, the Communists and Anarchists attached themselves to the party of the left which, though prevailing at the polls, had not gained there a majority strong enough to work without them. They captured the government in fact—the thing they pretend in their foreign propaganda is still the duly-elected Republican government, behind which they try to shelter themselves in their efforts to mobilize public opinion abroad in their favor.

Then began the terroristic conditions which produced the military movement of revulsion in July, 1936; the movement which is properly called "nationalistic"—for there was no longer an administration worthy of the name of "duly elected government"—and this protesting manifestation was soon joined by all the respectable parties in the country. Even the intellectuals, who had so greatly contributed to the success of the republican movement, and the more moderate men outstanding in the formation of the republican state, could no longer stomach the excesses of the extremists of the left, and have practically all abjured the so-called government.

Among them I mention only the provisional president and first elected president of the republic, who was put out by the Communists when they usurped and destroyed the duly elected government; the minister for foreign affairs in the first cabinet who was repeatedly in office until the communistic regime began; the first Ambassador to the United States, the first Ambassador to Great Britain, and Prof. Unamuno, the distinguished and widely known intellectual of the University of Salamanca. There are very many more.

Communism Described In Pathological Terms.

COMMUNISM is a pathological problem, and a disease dangerous to the state chiefly because it is an antireligious manifestation. Its strongest resisting force is the force that is found in religious influences, and so its first effort is to weaken them in order to break them down. The instinctive reaction of the human body is to purge itself of any poison that has entered it and the reaction of the healthy elements of a state is the same. Arnold Lunn in his book, "Spanish Rehearsal," says that Red atrocities were the cause and not the consequences of the nationalist rising. That is merely a statement of established fact, and I may add that the immediate occasion for the epiphany of this protesting movement was the brutal murder of a moderate member of the Cortes in the opposition, Senor Calvo Sotelo, who, in spite of his legal immunity from arrest as a legislator, was dragged at night from his own house by government agents and done to death in the outskirts of Madrid. The decency of Spain could stand no more.

The military rising that followed was not a rebellion against established government—good or bad—but an instinctive reaction for self-preservation of people who were bent on restoring social order when they saw that the government had crumbled and was powerless to control the conflagration it had lighted. The situation is somewhat analogous to that moment of the French Revolution when the Reign of Terror of 1793-1794, also based on theism, had shocked the French people into dethroning the obscene Goddess of Reason which the agents of the Terror had set up. They rose against Robespierre and executed him and his supporters. History does not call that revulsion a rebellion against a duly constituted republican government, nor those who led it rebels; still less were the French terrorists called loyalists.

Observer Sees Rise Of Brutality In World.

ARNOLD LUNN says further in his book from which I have borrowed a phrase: "The brutality of the Roman world into which Christ was born is returning. Torture, which was slowly disappearing from a world influenced but never dominated by the Christian ethos, is reappearing, and it is no coincidence that this recrudescence of sadism should coincide with outbursts of that communism which is directed by the only state which has formally adopted militant atheism as its creed."

One of its adherents, a minister of justice in the government of Valencia, was reported in the Spanish press on the first of January of last year to have said at a public meeting: "Man comes not from God, but from the beasts; that is why his reactions are those of a beast."

The mass of the Spanish race today—a race not Latin but radically Iberian and Visigothic, affected more by the high culture of the Moors than that of the Romans—is true to its blood; a hard, resistant, vigorous and pugnacious strain; highly individualistic with a touch of fatalism, not very sensitive to pain either physical or mental, capable of bearing great hardships with equanimity and of living on very meager fare.

The history of the Spanish peninsula has been one of incessant internal warfare and it is likely to change only with a change of character of the race. Whatever may be the immediate outcome of the present struggle, a democracy as we understand it is impossible with people of such a spirit. They have always been monarchically inclined because such a form interferes comparatively little with their extreme individualism, which excludes co-operation. For the same reasons they are not likely to tolerate a Fascist system, nor to sink into the threatening morass of immigrant communism which has liberated and encouraged the propensities of the bestial element and so produced this nationalistic movement of revulsion.

Half-Holiday for Schools; Crack Troops, Veterans Will March.

With 125 individual units already scheduled to take part, Washington's annual Army Day parade April 6 is expected to break all records, it was announced yesterday by the Military Order of the World War, sponsor of the procession.

Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons, newly appointed corps area commander, is to serve as grand marshal if he arrives in the Capital from his former command in San Antonio, Tex., in time. Maj. Ernest W. Brown and a platoon of Metropolitan police will be the escort.

District school children will be given a half-holiday to see the parade providing they obtain letters from their parents stating their absence will be for that purpose.

Five Divisions.

The procession will consist of five divisions to be headed, respectively, by Maj. Gen. William Bryden (who will serve as grand marshal if Gen. Parsons is unable to be present), commanding Army, Navy, Marine, Naval Reserve and Coast Guard detachments; Col. John W. Oehmann, in command of the District of Columbia National Guard; Col. Leroy W. Herron, Field Artillery Reserve, acting brigade commander, leading organized reserve units; Col. Jesse C. Drain, in command of school and college cadets, and Lieut. Col. George E. Ijams, past commander in chief of the Military Order of the World War, commanding representatives of veterans' organizations.

Among units of the first division will be the Army and Navy bands United States Marine Drum and Bugle Corps, mounted band, Third Cavalry; detachment of light tanks, Sixty-sixth Infantry, of Fort Meade; ambulance detachments from the Army Medical Center, machine gun troop, Tenth Cavalry; First Battalion, Sixteenth Field Artillery, from Fort Myer; Seventh Infantry, from Fort Washington, and Thirty-fourth Infantry from Fort George G. Meade.

The second division will include the 121st Engineers and their band, 260th Coast Artillery with drum and bugle corps, special troops, Twenty-ninth Division, and Coast Artillery; 372nd Infantry.

Cadets to March.

In the third division will be reserve detachments from the field artillery, cavalry, infantry, coast artillery, engineers and service units and reserve officers. The second section of this division, headed by Col. West Hamilton, will include infantry units and unassigned officers.

On Col. Drain's staff in the fourth division will be Cadet Capt. Patrick H. Crafton, Georgetown R. O. T. C., and Cadet Col. John W. Green, W. H. S. cadets. Troops will come from Georgetown University, University of Maryland, Howard University and St. John's College. Each unit will have its own band.

Public stands will be erected on Constitution avenue from Fourteenth to Seventeenth street. Tickets are obtainable from headquarters of the Military Order of the World War, 1700 I street northwest.

Nicholas II

By W. Chapin Huntington

Intimate Glimpses Of The Last Tsar.

BECAUSE A DUTIFUL SON had the life-long habit of corresponding regularly and frequently with his loving and managing mother, we have these enlightening letters of the last Russian Tsar and the Dowager Empress. From over 500 letters whose originals are preserved in the Soviet archives, an English editor has selected those which appeared to him most significant. They cover 38 years: at the beninning a little boy of 11 writes of his games and toys; at the end he is imprisoned in his former palace. It must be admitted that the letters contain no startling revelations; they do not cause us to alter materially our conception of Nicholas II, but they do correct and humanize it.

Nicholas was above all a family man, never so happy as in his home. His courtship of Princess Alix of Hesse and their engagement are a beautiful idyll. It was only after a long inward struggle that she consented to marry him and then "the whole world changed for me: nature, mankind, everything; and all seemed to be good, lovable and happy." Nor did his love ever cease. In the midst of a merry house-party at Balmoral he deplores: "I see even less of Alix here than at home where deputations and audiences with ministers interfere enough."

A lover of nature, he is happiest in the country and when the companion of his walks, a beloved dog, dies, he telegraphs his mother his sorrow. The references to the Tsar's children are delightful and touching and we share his anguish as he looks on helplessly at his little son's spasms in an attack of haemophilia, the dread disease which would have kept him from the throne.

• • • •

ONE WISHES that these intimate letters showed Nicholas the ruler in as favorable a light as Nicholas the husband and father. It is true that he exhibits more force of character than we had been accustomed to concede him. Soon after his accession he firmly refuses his mother's plea to lend a bankrupt favorite a million rubles from the public treasury. Nor was he without training for his exalted position. His mother had steadily taught him as a youth that he must be polite and courteous, friendly but not unduly intimate with comrades, and never attentive to flatterers. Evidently he was not without a sense of the glory of holy Russia and he realized that his position required him to sacrifice personal comfort.

But this was not enough. He could not get out of this dear family world and into touch with his people and times. He tries not to let his ministers "pester him with trifles" and hopes that they will not "swamp him with work" when his baby is born for "that would be truly cruel." Officers of his favorite regiments are the only people he knows. The free-and-easy sociability of Uncle Bertie (King Edward VII) shocks him; and he is angered when the Danish government permits a Socialist congress in Copenhagen. Yet, confined at Peterhof because of plots on his life, he gazes wistfully at the peaceful life of his royal relatives in England and Denmark without perceiving that their relations with their people make this possible.

IN THE REVOLUTION of 1905—the prelude to the overthrow of 1917 and to Bolshevism—this isolation is tragically evident. Nicholas has no conception of what is happening around him. The great railway strike is just "a shame." "God knows what happened in the universities. Every kind of riffraff walked in from the streets." An armed rising was imminent in Petersburg. There were only two alternatives, rivers of blood or granting a constitution. "There was no other way out than to cross one's self and give what everyone was asking for." When the new constitution did not immediately bring quiet it was because "nine-tenths of the trouble-makers are Jews"—"That is how the pogroms happened."

The Tsar finds the conferences dealing with electoral law "tiring." Some proposed universal suffrage but he firmly refused this as a "fantastic idea." Finally the country quieted down. Nicholas had, in his own words, "met terror with terror." Witte, the Prime Minister, soon lost his hold on the Tsar and his opponent "honest Trepoff" was secretly installed in the palace, reading and interpreting the premier's confidential memoranda to his sovereign. What a conception of responsible administration!

In foreign affairs Nicholas appears to somewhat better advantage. His mother who adored her sister, Queen Alexandra of England, was very pro-English and her son, as far as the fragmentary letters show, shared this sympathy in a qualified form. In the first Balkan war he refers to "the egotistical schemes of the great powers," adding that "in this matter, strange as it may seem, alas, England is hampering us more than anybody else." And a year before the Great War he reflects sadly that "there is no such thing as European unity—merely great powers distrusting each other."

For the French who were Russia's allies, the Tsar seems to have had a warm regard but the Germans and Austrians are potential enemies. After the annexation by Austria of Bosnia and Herzegovina he writes his mother, "It is quite true that the form and method of Germany's action has simply been brutal and we won't forget it." Both mother and son disliked their kinsman, Kaiser Wilhelm, whom they regarded as an aggressive, bumptious poser. It makes Nicholas "want to vomit" to have to appoint Wilhelm admiral in the Russian navy.

• • • •

THE WORD "SECRET" in the title of this book is unjustified and suggests a device of salesmanship for the letters contain no great mystery. They do not form a complete series and they thin out toward the end. What they give us is interesting glimpses—"close-ups"—rather than a connected story. For this the letters are a helpful contribution to our knowledge of an inadequate and tragic historical figure.

A Children's Story

By Grif Alexander

WELL, THEN, there was a little girl named Elizabeth and she had pretty much her own way in the house until she was 4 years old, and then a little sister arrived and seemed to take up all the attention of papa and mamma. You know how it is. A little person wonders what has come over everybody. And perhaps she hears one of the servants say to another. "Huh-huh, somebody's nose is out of joint." It is all very confusing. And sometimes it leads to sad and even tragic times.

But not in this case. For papa and mamma were wise. They said to Elizabeth, "We have a present for you; a little baby sister; and her name is Margaret Rose."

So naturally that made a difference. It was something of her own and just had to be attended to. So she said, "Goody! And I'll call her Bud for she isn't a real Rose yet."

So Elizabeth loved Margaret Rose as much as though she were a baby doll, and Margaret Rose was worthy of affection. At 2 years old she could catch and sing the tune of any song she heard. At 3 she pottered around the vegetable garden, specializing in lettuce, carrots and potatoes. She carried the potatoes around in her little pockets for exhibition purposes and knew the names of several varieties.

And she was as much like a butterfly as a rosebud. If you happened to be visiting and she liked you, you'd see her tiny face at the door for a moment, then up would go her arms and she'd spin across the room like a feather in the wind and you simply had to catch her and pick her up and like as not she'd kiss you and then laugh and laugh and everybody would join in.

Old stuff? Yep. The kind of stuff young fathers from Georgetown, Alexandria and other spots 'round about mention, half apologetically, one to the other.

Elizabeth and Margaret are now 12 and 8 and have ponies and can ride very nicely. Elizabeth has always loved horses. She says if she were Queen she would make a law providing that no horse should work on Sunday, as they are entitled to a day of rest.

Quaint, eh, what? Quite.

It is quite beside the point that the two little girls are princesses and that Elizabeth may some day be Queen of England. Why bring that up? Let the children enjoy themselves.

And if Lady Cynthia sometimes shows a somewhat reverential awe in the telling of her story, that's quite all right, too. Please remember that the book was "written and published by the gracious permission of their majesties and illustrated with many private snapshots." And that probably means a whole lot to Lady Cynthia and her publishers.

Leader Pledges Labor to Strike To Save Blum

Premier's Backers Block His Arms Program in Fear of 'Fascism.'

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 27.—Leon Jouhaux, secretary of the General Confederation of Labor, today pledged workers' support of the government's fight with the Senate against a national union cabinet.

Fears have been expressed such a ministry might serve as an excuse to put the Rightists in power.

Jouhaux, speaking at Caen before 3,000 Leftists declared:

"The working class will go as far as an active general strike in order to bar the road against threatening domestic fascism."

The labor confederation, an organization of 5,000,000 workers, is one of the main backers of the Peoples' Front cabinet.

At the same time Jouhaux demanded of the government that it institute foreign exchange control, "nationalization of trusts" and other measures.

He said it was necessary for France to furnish arms to the Spanish government.

Meanwhile, Premier Leon Blum and his ministers labored unavailingly to end strikes in the metal industry.

Last night the Paris Communist Party unit proposed a "powerful demonstration by the masses" to meet what it termed "reactionary" opposition in the French Senate to Blum's financial program.

Many labor leaders considered the communists' letter to Paris metal workers, which contained the proposal, a move for nation-wide strikes greater than those of June, 1936, when a million and a half workers occupied French factories.

An estimated 30,000 workers were on "stay-in" strikes already in metallurgical factories of the Paris and Lille regions—a movement which started three days ago to show, among other things, support for the Blum government.

Between talks with workers' and employers' representatives today, Blum lunched with Winston Churchill, a conservative member of the British parliament and world war cabinet minister.

Officials said Churchill expressed fear that the stries would bring a dangerous delay in French arms manufacturing.

Schools Proposed For 'Urbiculture'

Establisment of a National Real Estate Foundation was voted at a meeting of business leaders held last week at the Carlton Hotel. The purpose of the foundation, it was explained, will be the study of "factors influencing land values, the direction of city growth, the complicated problem of municipal services and the method of financing them."

The group also recommended establishment of "Colleges of Urbiculture," which would study city problems as schools of agriculture now do rural problems.

Truman Hurt In Auto Wreck At Hagerstown

4 Victims in Head-On Crash at Silver Spring; Taxi Strikes Down Man.

Senator and Mrs. Harry S. Truman, of Missouri, and their daughter, Mary Margaret Truman, narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday when their car crashed into a telephone pole after colliding with another auto at Hagerstown, Md.

The Senator received minor bruises when his head struck the windshield. Mrs. Truman and the daughter suffered severe shock.

According to police, Senator Truman's car passed through a boulevard stop sign and the other auto, driven by J. Robert Potts, of Hagerstown, skidded 40 feet before coming to a halt. No charges were placed against either driver although police obtained a writ of foreign attachment for $90 on the Senator's car, pending further investigation.

John H. Harrel, 31, of Birmingham, Ala., was critically injured last night when he was struck by a hit-run taxicab as he stepped from the curb at Thirteenth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast. The cab sped from the scene, leaving him unconscious in the street.

A police scout car, hailed two blocks from the accident by a passerby, took the injured man to Gallinger Hospital, where he was said to have suffered a fracture of the left side of the skull and a basal skull fracture.

Cars Crash Head-On.

Four persons were injured, one critically, when two cars crashed head-on at a high rate of speed on the Colesville Pike near Leighton avenue in Silver Spring, Md.

So great was the force of the impact that the two machines were welded together. Two wrecking cars were required to separate them after firemen had extinguished flames which burst from one of the smashed autos.

Those injured were James L. Manger, 24, 1931 Calvert street northwest, taken to Emergency Hospital suffering from a fractured skull and numerous cuts on the face and body; Mrs. Victoria Fielder, 27, 1630 R street northwest, and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Corwell, of Clear Spring, Md., all taken to the Washington Sanitarium suffering from cuts.

Policemen Charles Barnes and D. W. Linthcum, of Montgomery County police, said they were forced to drive their squad car off the road when Manger's auto passed them just before the accident.

Three Drivers Arrested.

Earl B. Whittington, 1305 Clifton street northwest, was charged with driving while under the influence of liquor after his car overturned on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard and slid on its side nearly 150 yards before coming to a stop in a field.

Mark Farmer, 28, of Riverdale, Md., an occopant of the car, suffered cuts on an arm and was taken to Casualty Hospital by members of the Bladensburg Rescue Squad. Another passenger, L. H. Alexander, also of Riverdale, escaped injury.

Merle Poe, of Laurel, Md., suffered a broken arm when his motorcycle collided with a car operated by A. L. Singleton, of Beltsville, on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard. Singleton was charged with reckless driving and released under $200 bond.

A 12-year-old boy, Harold Dodd, 1277 Orren place northeast, was severely injured when knocked from his bicycle by a car at New York avenue and Fenwick street northeast. He was taken to Sibley Hospital and treated for a possible fracture of the skull. Police charged the driver of the car, Harry T. Rowland, of Towson, Md., with reckless driving.

Get Excess Acid Out of Kidneys

Oftimes backache bothers and getting up nights breaks up a good night's sleep—sometimes flow is scanty and difficult and smarts and burns.

But be sure and ask for and get a 35 cent box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—right from Haarlem in Holland—do not accept counterfeits. Adv.

U.S. Missions Warned Japan May 'Retaliate'

Consul Radios Charge They Are Letting Chinese Use Property.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Monday), March 28.—American missionaries in southern Shantung Province, still at their posts in China's bloodiest war zone, were informed by radio today of Japanese charges that mission property was being used by Chinese forces.

Missionaries at Lini and Yihsien particularly were warned of the possibility of Japanese retaliation.

Five Women, Three Men.

Three women, Miss G. M. Rowley, of Santa Ana, Calif.; Miss M. M. Wagner, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. T. N. Thompson, of Cambridge, Ohio, were believed to be at the northern Presbyterian Mission in Yihsien.

Americans at a northern Presbyterian mission in Lini were believed to include Miss Katherine Hand, of Topeka, Kans.; Miss Margaret Winslepp, of Collinsville, La.; Dr. B. M. Harding, and K. W. Wilson, of Los Angeles, and E. J. Woodberry, of Worcester, Mass.

Japanese military sources reported one southern Shantung force was ready for a final assault on Lini, about 70 miles northeast of Suchow, but Chinese declared the invaders were being driven back.

Chinese Turn Tables.

There were conflicting reports on the war at Yihsien, but the Chinese asserted they were making a heavy counter-attack. Yihsien, on a spur of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, lies 45 miles northeast of Suchow.

The Chinese told of a turning of tables on the Japanese central front defensive along both the Tientsin-Pukow and the Pieping-Hankow railways, which intersect the Lunghai Railway, backbone of the central front.

The Japanese indirectly admitted the force of the Chinese counter-drive in southern Shantung. Domei (Japanese News Agency), reported that "rivers of blood washed the border of Shantung as tens of thousands of Chinese sought to stem the Japanese drive southward."

Japan Losing 1,000 a Day.

Along the Peiping-Hankow Railway, Japanese losses are averaging 1,000 a day, Gen. Cheng Chien, Chinese commander, reported. He said the tide had turned against the Japanese, who were defending their costly gains north of the Yellow River.

New Nanking Regime.

Shanghai (Monday), March 28 (AP). Inauguration of a Japanese-sponsored "reformed government of the republic of China" was officially announced today to replace the regime of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Establishment of the new regime in Nanking, China's Japanese-conquered capital, was made public in a manifesto signed by Liang Hung-tze as chairman of the new executive Yuan, a position equivalent to premier.

The puppet government apparently was similar to the regime already established by the Japanese in north China.

'Sap Lists' Studied In War on Tipsters

New York, March 27 (U.P.).—Federal attorney's aides examined more than a ton of secret files and "sucker lists" yesterday in an investigation of supposed horse race tipsters accused of mulcting their victims of $80,000,000.

Documents were seized in a series of raids after indictments were returned charging 23 persons with mail fraud and conspiracy. Those indicted included Jacob Aldeman, alleged head of the ring, and 12 of his relatives. Nearly 40 others were arrested on various charges. The ring, which published several handicapper's tip sheets, used 107 fictitious names in its operations, officers said.

Songs Help Pair Hang to Canoe Until Rescue

Refusing to abandon a younger friend who could not swim, a 15-year-old boy yesterday helped his panic-stricken companion to hang to the side of their overturned canoe and bolstered his spirits by singing for more than half an hour until rescuers pulled both of them from the Anacostia River.

The boys, Allen Stager, 15, and George Watts, 14, were paddling a frail, rented canoe near the Eleventh Street Bridge when the wash from a speedboat capsized the smaller craft.

Knowing his friend could not swim, Allen assisted him to the overturned boat, to help him keep his nerve, and sang such popular melodies as "Tippy Tippy Toes" and "Dipsy Doodle." Several times the younger boy's numb fingers began to slip from the canoe.

Hundreds Unable to Aid.

Hundreds of persons lined the bank of the river, powerless to aid the boys as they floated downstream. After holding to the craft for 30 minutes, they floated under the Eleventh Street Bridge, where Robert Craig, a Navy Yard employe, threw them a life ring. They were forced to remain in the water another 10 or 15 minutes before a launch from the Navy Yard reached them.

Returning to shore, George attempted to change his position in the small rescue launch, tripped and fell, striking his head on the side of the boat. It took a sailor five minutes to revive him.

Wrapped in warm blankets and given hot coffee at the Navy Yard, the boys appeared none the worse for their experience but remarked that the water had been "mighty cold."

Both Boy Scouts.

George, who lives at 607 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, praised his friend and told how the older boy had slapped him several times to keep him calm when the canoe first overturned.

"Allen is a swell fellow," the boy said, "we've known each other since we joined the Boy Scouts a year ago and I knew he wouldn't desert me."

They had just turned the canoe in a position to meet the wash of one boat, the boys said, when waves from another craft suddenly upset them. It was the second time either of the boys had been in any kind of a boat.

French Envoy Attends Preview of Paintings

Mrs. Dwight Davis and Mrs. George Garrett Arrange Exhibit of Pictures of Flowers and Fruit; Wallace Also Present.

By Elizabeth Ford.

Members of Washington society ducked in yesterday afternoon out of a perfect spring day (full of cherry blossoms and tourists) to admire 55 "wall-flowers" all gathered together under one roof by Mrs. Dwight Davis and Mrs. George Garrett at their Museum of Modern Art Gallery on Seventeenth street. The occasion: The preview exhibit of paintings of flowers and fruits. The man of the moment: The French Ambassador, who toured the whole display, with a mere word here and a broad smile there as he snapped his pince-nez at every picture present.

Two minutes after he had paused admiringly before an 8x12 canvas by Paul Gauguin, entitled modestly "Fleurs," everybody else was at the same spot, and standing room was at a premium, as Gauguin hit a new high.

Conversation, however, was not limited to the esoteric. There was plenty of small talk going the gallery rounds, and many of those fortunate enough to be bidden to the private view chatted comfortably about the minor things of life.

Henry A. Wallace Attends Exhibit

The Secretary of the Department of Birds and Bees, Henry A Wallace, was also on hand, casting an authoritative eye at the horticultural display on the pale gray walls. A few of the more modern splashes seem to have him a little stumped as to genus and species but nevertheless he appeared very pleased with it all. With him, of course, was Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, who on Saturday morning did the honors for the Amaryllis Show. Dressed in the nicest looking navy blue outfit in town, she was just as attractive as she always is. Her "toreador" hat exactly matched her dres, which was topped off with a jacket in cape effect.

Mrs. Davis, in a stunning print ensemble of mingled white and brown, a small brown hat and a big pink flower on her shoulder, received the guests informally. With Mrs. Garrett, who was attired in a light pink jacket and dark skirt and a mauve-colored pill-box hat trimmed with a bevy of pink feathers, she managed to get in a welcoming word to everyone present.

Glimpsed among those at the show were Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips; Washington's most constant rooters for things artistic. Mrs. Phillips wore a simple black dress trimmed with big gold buttons. Also present was Mrs. Gari Melchers, widow of the famous American painter, who had lent her husband's picture, item number 29, "Flowers in a Yellow Pot," to the current exhibition.

Tony Balasy Among Guests

For the most part, the diplomatic corps was in absentia, although tall Anthony de Balasy, Counselor of the Hungarian Legation, was on hand.

Among those who came early was Miss Mabel Boardman, all done up in gray, with a silver fox cape and a contrasting white hat. Still others around and about at the invitation preview were Senator and Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, she very handsome in black; Mr. and Mrs. C. Law Watkins, the latter simply dressed in dark blue; Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Tracy Dows, and that tired business man, Marvin McIntyre. Others were Mr. and Mrs. William Castle, Mrs. Stanley Reed, and Lewis Todd Moneyway, president of the Arts Club.

Flash yourself, Mr. Winchell! As predicted recently on this page by a comrade-de-typewriter, the wedding of Walter Lippmann, high-brow pillarist for the New York Herald Tribune, and Mrs. Helen Byrne Armstrong, has now taken place. The nuptials were solemnized on Saturday in Manhattan.

The couple, after a wedding trip through the South, will make their home in Washington.

Miss Jean Shuler Is Betrothed

Mrs. George Kent Shuler has announced the engagement of her daughter, Jean, to Lieut. John J. Cosgrove, U. S. M. C. No date has been set for the wedding. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Cosgrove, of Providence, R. I.

Miss Shuler attended the Girls' Academy in Albany, N. Y.; Kew Forest School, Forest Hills, Long Island, and Western High School and the Majorie Webster School in this city.

Lieut. Cosgrove now is stationed at Quantico, Va., but has been ordered to Guantanamo, Cuba. It is there that the young couple will live after their wedding.

Oscar Nohowel and Lewis Breuninger, students in St. Albans' School, have returned to their studies after spending two weeks in Miami Beach. While in Florida, they were with Mrs. Margaret Dressler Nohowel.

The Nohowels plan to go to California in the early summer before sailing for their home in Cannes, France.

27 D. C. Women To Act as Pages

Twenty-seven young women from the District have been announced as among the 350 representing all sections of the country, who will serve as pages at the coming forty-seventh Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Dressed in shimmering white, the pages comprise the "beauty brigade" of the Congress, constantly on duty during the sessions and performing a multitude of tasks for the officers, delegates and committee members.

Personal pages of the president general, Mrs. William A. Becker, will be Miss Beryl Hague, of Roseland, N. J.; Miss Edith Harvey, Trenton, N. J.; Mrs. Thoda Minkler Scott, Evanston, Ill., and Miss Jean Woolverton, of Trenton.

Among the platform pages will be Mrs. Harriet Haig Green, daughter of Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, retiring state regent of the District of Columbia, who is a candidate for vice president general; Miss Helen Towner, also of Washington, and Miss Elizabeth Sherier, of Alexandria, Va.

The floor pages include a number of girls from the District. Among them are: Mrs. Ruth H. Eagleton, Mrs. Margaret Egan, Mrs. Helen F. Everitt, Mrs. F. Eleanor Gardner, Miss Jeanette Gibson, Miss Jane Grunwell, Miss Aileen Harris, Miss Lucille Hessick, Miss Barbara Hoffman, Miss Bertha Howard, Mrs. Una Dorsey Isham, Miss Kathleen Jones. Miss Helen Mark, Miss Evelyn Markham, Miss Edna Boyden Millward, Miss Nancy Ordway, Miss Mildred E. Paddock, Miss Helen Speed Pickens, Mrs. Edith Gram Poole, Miss Rebecca Reily, Miss Caroline Schaller, Miss Frank Wood Smoot, Miss Margaret A. Turner, Mrs. Margaret V. Warrington and Mrs. Verna P. Young. Miss Francis S. Sinclair, of Alexandria, Va., also is among the floor pages.

Two Little Maids From School Are They Hessler-Henderson.

Miss Catherine Lane and Miss Frances Bird, who are the guests of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Williams Samples at their home on Morrison street. The young ladies will leave Washington next week to return to their respective schools . . . Miss Lane to Smith College, where she is in her freshman year, and Miss Bird to Sweet Briar College, where she is also a freshman.

Party Is Given For Mrs. Broy

Mrs. Charles Broy, wife of the American consul in Brussels, was the guest of honor yesterday afternoon at a tea given by Mrs. Glenn Alvin Smith and her sister, Miss Julia Young. Mrs. Broy is now visiting her sister, Mrs. Kimmel, at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Those assisting at the tea were Mrs. Carl Droop and Mrs. Enoch Chase, who poured; Mrs. Kindleberger Kirby, Miss Evelyn Chase, Mrs. Edwin Grayson, Miss Marian Zimmerman and Miss Mary Norwood.

Mrs. Broy, the former Miss Cecil Norton, is well known in Washington where she grew up, and where later she filled the position of head of the District Community Center.

Her husband and James Barclay Young, brother of Mrs. Smith and Miss Young, the hostesses, entered the foreign service on the same day and have been friends ever since.

Mr. Young now fills the post of consul general in Lisbon, Portugal, an assignment to which he was transferred recently from Vienna. He and Mrs. Young live in a large and comfortable house overlooking the water.

Mrs. Broy will remain in Washington for an indefinite length of time.

Bank Women's Club Will Install April 25

Miss Mildred Woodcock, of the American Security & Trust Co., has been elected president of the Bank Women's Club of the District of Columbia for the coming year. She succeeds Miss Winifred Burwell, of the National Metropolitan Bank, who also is president of the Zonta Club.

Officers serving with her will be Miss Katherine McCalmont, vice president; Miss Jane Kennedy, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Gertrude Wick, recording secretary; Miss Doris Strobel, treasurer, and Miss Helen Healey, historian.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

HERE AND THERE over the week-end: Saturday night was gala-gala at the Chevy Chase Club. Although there were no free champagne, cocktails or paper hats, the semi-weekly dance attracted a full house, the largest crowd so far this season.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Besides the inevitable family parties always encountered at this suburban stronghold, there was the home-from-school contingent in full force, Emlyn Davies, poetry-writing daughter of Ambassador Joseph Davies, was there with her Vassar classmate, Emily Moore. Miss Davies has arrived to spend the holidays with her mother, Mrs. Emlyn Knight Davies.

Anne and Constance Child were present, which is almost not news any more, as they are Saturday evening "regulars" at Chevy Chase. The Bacon sisters, Ivy and Martha, were getting much attention from the stag line, as were Dolly Corbin, Mrs. Carroll Morgan and Caroline Cecil, all in red topped off with a coronet to match. Said stag line included Thomas Adams, William Fitzgerald, Thomas Early, down from Philadelphia; Harold Fangboner, John Galliher and many more.

A number of people shone in Florida tans, among them Mrs. Walter White, recently returned from Miami, and Mrs. Brinkley Smithers, who set hers off with a handsome white number of lace and tulle with turquoise trimming the bodice.

• • • •

IF THE PRESENT CRAZE for trying to be the last arrival at a party keeps up, hostesses might just as well relax and not come to their own functions until at least an hour after the invitation indicates. Mary Stanley's party for Christine Long and her fiance said 4:30, but at half past five there were only ten couples with the floor all to themselves.

By 6 the Italian garden of the Mayflower was packed, however, mostly with out-of-towners from Baltimore and Laurel, Md., home of Miss Stanley. Sidney's orchestra played for dancing and there were over 200 present.

Among the Washington contingent—strictly in the minority—were Dolly Corbin, Stellita Stapleton, smothered in silver fox and orchids; Lieut. Richard Hunt, White House aide; Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan—the former will be best man at the Long-Willcox marriage next month; Kay Pearson and Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Huntington Clarke. The former Suzanne Hill wore a red polka-dotted frock.

The hat of the season so far was worn by Frances Andrews, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews. A black sailor, it had a red chiffon veil reaching practically to the hem of her skirt.

ODDS AND ENDS: Glimpsed coming out of a performance of "Snow White:" Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes with Mrs. Hughes . . . Benedetto Capomazza, of the Italian Embassy staff, will sail on Saturday for a vacation in Europe . . . The Assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Coleby have asked a few friends to drop in for cocktails on Wednesday . . . Miss Betty Hardie spent the week-end in Middleburg . . . Among those entertaining at small informal dinners on Saturday evening were Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Rumbold and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Joyce . . . the Third Secretary of the French Embassy and Mme. Charles Lucet had four or five friends lunching with them yesterday at their house on Thirty-fourth street . . . which reminds us that Mlle. Nadia Boulanger is due here again for a visit April 3 and 4. The famous French orchestra conductress will lecture on music.

MR. AND MRS. Arthur Sweetser have visiting them for several days in their suite at the Wardman Park Hotel, their daughter, Miss Adelaide Vander Pool Sweetser, who is a student at the Sarah Lawrence College in New York. Mr. Sweetser is the well-known author, coming here from New York City with Mrs. Sweetser a short time ago. Mr. and Mrs. Sweetser make their permanent home in Geneva.

1,000 Take Part In Post Pageant

Big doings will be under way this evening at Fort Myer, when the costume pageant, "Hoofprints of 1938," goes into its dress rehearsal.

Considering there will be more than 1,000 men, women and children (heaven knows how many horses) in the show, it ought to be quite an event. All the costumes, properties and scenery have been constructed specially for this year's edition of the pageant under direction of Capt. John B. Reybold.

The real show goes on (not dress rehearsal) on the evenings of March 31, April 1, 2 and 3, and on the afternoon of April 3. The first part of the program, as you may have heard, will be devoted to scenes from the life of "Tamerlane;" then there will be a "Ballet of the Horses" with Capt. Isaac L. Kitts' dressage mare, American Lady, taking a few leaps and bows, and finally there will be a regular Wild West rodeo entitled "Life and Death On the Prairie."

So come and get your seats and sodapop early.

Miss Sternheim To Become Bride

Dr. and Mrs. Emanuel Sternheim, of New York City, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Naomi Sternheim, of Washington, to Eugene S. Zemans, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Zemans, of Goshen, Ind., and formerly of Chicago, Ill.

The wedding will take place early in April.

Miss Sternheim was educated at Reed College, Portland, Oreg., the University of Montana and Western Reserve University in Cleveland. She is at present assistant to the editor of Community Service, the monthly publication of the Washington Council of Social Agencies; and is also chairman of publicity for the Women's City Club of Washington.

Mr. Zemans, a University of Michigan graduate, later studied at the University of Chicago School of Social Service Administration and at Georgetown University School of Law.

He is now employed by the Bureau of Prisons, Department of Justice, and is editor of the publication, Federal Probation.

Round of Fetes Scheduled for British Cruiser

Pettengill Party to Be One of Biggest for Men of the York.

If it were H. M. S. Pinafore itself, H. M. S. York, the British cruiser, which will arrive in Washington today, couldn't be receiving more of a welcome.

In fact, all the available "sisters, cousins and aunts" of the Navy hereabouts seem to be planning parties for the visiting tars whose pre-Easter appearance is putting vitamins into what for several weeks has been a slumping season.

One of the biggest events on the schedule will take place tomorrow afternoon when Mrs. George Pettengill, wife of Rear Admiral Pettengill, Commandant of the Navy Yard, gives an "at home" for the officers of the York.

Assisting her will be Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of Admiral Leahy, chief of Naval Operations; Mrs. Thomas C. Hart, Mrs. Adolphus Andrews, Mrs. Ralston Holmes and Mrs. Stephen Rowan.

Also Mrs. Emmett Gudger, Mrs. William Robert Monroe and Mrs. Harley Cope.

The tea table will be decked in masses of white snapdragons and freesia, while all over the rest of the Pettengill's interesting house at the Yard will be cherry boughs, snapdragons and roses.

Cocktail Party Opens Gay Round For the Schlatters

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Schlatter yesterday were given a cocktail party by Robert Knowlton. From now until their departure April 16 for Belgium, where Mr. Schlatter, retiring attache of the Swiss Embassy, will take over his new duties as second secretary in Belgium, their calendar is crammed full of farewell get-togethers with their many friends in Washington.

Sharing honors with the Schlatters at yesterday's "5 to 7" was Mme. Schlatter's sister, Miss Olga Patterson.

Among the guests were Senoritas Rebecca and Marta Trucco, daughters of the Ambassador of Chile; Decio de Moura, second secretary of the Brazilian Embassy; Philip Bonsil, Mannix Walker, and the first secretary of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Huneeus.

Also among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Arch Eddy, Miss Caroline Cecil, Miss Fina Tudela (who will entertain for the Schlatters a little later); Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet; the second secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Luis Mariano Zuberbuhler, and Victor Sutro.

Gourmets' Society Will Hold Dinner

Those who make an art of eating will meet at the Raleigh this evening to practice a little of their art when the Washington chapter of Les Amis d'Escoffier Society of Gourmets foregathers for dinner.

Among those who will be present is G. Selmer Fougner, well known gourmet and columnist, whose "Along the Wine Trail" appears daily in a New York paper. Both he and Mrs. Fougner are staying at the Raleigh.

Mrs. Alexander V. Dye, wife of the director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, will entertain at luncheon on Wednesday in compliment to Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce. Guests will be members of the two clubs composed of wives of men in the foreign commerce department and wives whose husbands are heads of departments in the bureau.

Mrs. Overton Hostess.

Mrs. John H. Overton, wife of Senator Overton, of Louisiana, will entertain at luncheon today at the Colonial Room of the Wardman Park Hotel. Later she will take her guests to the hotel's solarium for bridge. This is one in a series of bridge luncheons Mrs. Overton is giving.

W.P. Parramore And Miss Ecton Wed in Virginia

Couple, Both of Washington, Plan to Make Home in Colonial Heights.

The wedding of Miss Maude Elizabeth Ecton to William Powell Parramore, of Washington, took place in Richmond, Va., Saturday afternoon. The ceremony was solemnized at the Seventh Street Christian Church at 4 o'clock with the Rev. F. W. Burnham, pastor of the church, officiating. The couple will make their home in Colonial Heights, Va.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Ecton and the granddaughter of the late Senator and Mrs. Charles B. Ecton, of Lexington, Ky. Mr. Parramore is the son of Judge D. Parramore, of the Eastern Shore of Virginia, and the late Mrs. Parramore.

The bride wore an ashes of roses crepe dress with navy blue accessories. Her beige coat was trimmed with fox, and she carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Josephine Parramore, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, and wore a tailored suit of British tan, with accessories to match. Her corsage was of Johanna Hill roses. T. Murray Scott, jr., of Randolph-Macon College, Va., served as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Parramore left for Charleston, S. C., to visit the Magnolia Gardens, after which they will continue on to Miami, Fla., before concluding their wedding trip.

The bride is a graduate of Hamilton College, in Lexington, Ky., and also attended the University of Kentucky.

Honor Is Paid Wife of Consul

Maria Maximovitch, young soprano, who is the wife of Cyrus B. Follmer, American Vice Consul at Berlin, has just been honored by two noted composers, Johan Franco, of Holland, and the Russian Dukelsky, who have invited her to sing in special concerts in this country and abroad.

Mme. Maximovitch, who has visited frequently in Washington and has many friends here, will leave for Holland late in April where she will give a series of concerts devoted exclusively to Franco's works and sponsored by the Royal Musical Society. Before sailing she will say "good-by" to American friends in her second and final Town Hall, New York, concert of the season, and also at a recital at the Hotel St. Regis, in New York. Two recitals in Washington are also tentatively scheduled for April.

Following her appearances in Holland, the young singer will rejoin her husband in Berlin for the summer, but is planning to return to this country in the fall for an extended concert tour.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Two Women, Nearing Sixty, Eager to Retain 'Shreds of Youth,' Seek Advice on Hair Dyeing.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We who are about to dye salute you. My friend and I, active women approaching 60, and that "rinses" no longer restore the color of our fading locks. Wishing, naturally, to prolong any lingering sheds of youth as long as possible and to look our best (as women should) we are wondering wha tto do. If I had a wart on the side of my nose, I would certainly have it removed. Streaked and faded hair belongs in the same category and it seems to me that scientific skill should be able to do something about it, safely and successfully.

• • • •

People are often ashamed of any effort to change graying hair and secretly answer some advertisement (often harmful) or ask their favorite finger-wave artist (who is seldom an authority beyond her line) for advice, which may account for some of the dismal failures one sometimes sees. Personally, I cannot see why it is any more shameful to try to keep one's hair beautiful than it is to diet to keep slender. Business women today do not give up their youthful appearance without a struggle.

• • • •

As a broad-minded, modern woman, what is your opinion of this matter? It is a question which bothers nearly every woman, and a lot of men, sooner or later in life. We would sincerely value your oponion, and any advice you can give. Is there any known coloring matter which is safe and natural in appearance for light brown hair? Sincerely,

M. M.

• • • •

What to Believe.

DEAR M. M.: For the woman less than 50 years of age, dyed, "rinsed" or "touched-up" hair sometimes does artistically enhance her appearance of youthfulness. After that age, I think the wisest thing she can do, from an esthetic point of view, is to have done with artificial hair coloring. She must think of herself as a whole picture, not of her hair as the single téll-tale item. If she would give the illusion of a youthful personality, with a well-preserved face and head, after 50, she has an ally, rather than an enemy, in silvery gray or snow white hair. Inasmuch as the outlines of her features will unquestionably have begun to blur a bit by that time, and the color of, as well as the sparkle in her eyes to fade a little, the contrast of what we might call a hard and fast color of hair, be it dark brown, medium brown, gold or black, would be disadvantageous, even if natural. Misty gray hair, or shining silver hair, on the other hand, makes a soft and flattering frame for her face, deals ever so gently and benignly with character lines about its mouth and eyes, and effectively points up the color of her eyes.

• • • •

She should look to the health of her hair, since it sheen, vitality, seeming bulk and manageability, if combined with a meticulously orderly and becoming coiffure, will do far more to keep her face and head in the youthful category than artificial hair coloring. For women nearing 60, I advocate such care of the hair as regular shampooing and scalp massage, assidnous brushing, oil treatments, perhaps, and a permanent wave at intelligently spaced intervals, in preference to hair dyeing. This may be a purely personal preference, but in my opinion the results obtained are much more attractive to the beholder and much more flattering to the person immediately concerned, than is the most convincingly dyed hair combined with a perceptibly aging countenance.

If you and your friend have reported, over a long period of time, to the use of so-called "rinses," it may be that this practice alone is largely responsible for the streaked and faded appearance of your locks. Such rinses can have a drying effect upon fine hair, causing it to look, as one of my correspondents wrote, more like "an old broom" than anything else. I suggest that you enlist the services of one of the most reputable hair-and-scalp specialists in town and concentrate on giving your crowning glory life rather than a special color. If the hair and scalp are healthy and well cared for; if your locks look alive and glossy and abundant; if they are softly waved or crisply curled and prettily combed, you'll find your countenance blooming out from your respective mirrors looking years younger than they did when you relied on rinses alone to suggest a youth you have long since outlived.

• • • •

I am of the opinion that the woman of any age looks youngest for her years when she holds herself up to the highest standard of good looks compatible with that particular age. When she tries to ape a younger age, she invites invidious comparison, and defeats her own purpose. I believe that a woman of 60, say, whose figure lines are clean cut, whose carriage is erect and buoyant, whose complexion has the clear tones and soft glow of health (which can always be cosmetically obtained), who gives the impression of being mentally and physically vigorous, and whose coiffure and clothes are chic and becoming, can be actually jaunty about her gray hair.

• • • •

Gray hair, believe it or not, has a fascination, almost, one might say, a glamour, all its own. To prove my point, let me tell you what happened after I received your letter. I took it, for discussion, to a man whose own hair is handsomely frosted with silver. He rocked back in his swivel chair, smiled, and told about meeting, two months ago, a woman he had worked with professionally about 20 years ago. They hadn't seen each other for ten years, and she, in the meantime, had become somewhat silvery haired herself.

• • • •

"She was always an attractive girl; not pretty, but interesting," he said. "But when I saw here the other day, I found her —— well, I don't know how to say it——." "Do you mean 'fascinating'?" I prompted him. "Yes," he said, eagerly, that's the word. I'd say she is a fascinating looking woman today. That gray hair has done something for her. We got to talking about it; kidded each other a good deal; she had noticed the way I was eyeing her hair. I couldn't help it. That gray hair of hers had made her into a beauty.

As Paris Designers See the Spring Mode

By Schiaparelli. By Heim By Patou.

Paris Styles Show Variety In Silhouette

Romanticism Featured by All Designers; Color Vies With Classic Black and White.

By Ethel Ehlen.

You can effect either a slim and definitely fitted silhouette or go bouffant and romantic, and still be in keeping with the trends of the style arbiters of Paris. The French collections which have arrived in America show both silhouettes in about equal numbers. In the realm of materials, lace and chiffon vie with silks and satins of beautiful solid colors and unusual printed patterns. Long-sleeved dinner gowns are giving the jacketed versions strong competition; fitted jackets of wool are extremely popular, too. Lingerie touches are much in evidence; accessories are given added importance. Sophistication and sentimentality are vying for first place in the mode—at present, the odds are about even. The following gives a concise picture of the highlights of some of the leading Paris designers.

• • • •

VIONNET—featuring the Directoire silhouette in silk lame and white mousseline; also, unusual off-the-shoulder interpretations in black lace. Full-length-caped evening ensembles of chiffon and lace. Chiffon flower applique giving the appearance of a brand-new material.

• • • •

CHANEL — strapless evening gowns with full skirts, accenting the waistline. Corselet either under or on top of dresses, usually in contrasting colors. Black lace evening gowns and short black gloves trimmed with lace. A white organdy dress trimmed in 500 yards of ribbon.

• • • •

SCHIAPARELLI—Circus theme in silk prints, clown hats and costume jewelry. Featuring a wide range of pink, a new blue, black, gray, mauve lilac, ivy green. Square decolletage for evening; hooded jackets.

• • • •

ALIX—Noted for slim silhouettes and uique draping, has gone bouffant in a number of evening dresses. Yoke dresses; silks and soft wools favorite fabrics; silk jersey for both evening gowns and bathing suits. Black, white, pale gray, sky blue, bright green, pink, important colors.

• • • •

MOLYNEUX—Looped skirts made of 20 yards of satin. Empress Eugenia bodices with low oval decolletage. Fichus or triangles of lace instead of evening jackets. Youthful tailored daytime clothes; glamor for evening. Winterhalter dance dresses. Muted colors and white, outstanding colors. Net, silk crepe, satin, crepey wools for materials.

• • • •

LANVIN—Daytime clothes reminiscent of Moyen age with long bodies and twin belts. Wide-skirted, Second Empire inspiration for evening.

• • • •

LELONG—Striking color combinations for both daytime and evening. High corselet frocks with gathered necklines for day; slim, slightly flared skirts for evening. Chiffon, silk, lace; flower trimming for evening.

• • • •

CREED—Strictly tailored creations, with novel details in lapels, collars, pockets. Numerous summer suits. Formal afternoon tuxedo suits. Dramatic color contrasts. Wool, silk, linen—the fabrics.

• • • •

MAINBOCHER—A new silhouette—simple molded bodice and slim skirt dramatized with gathered flounces. Four basic silhouettes; stemline, full-skirted, flower, creole (evening). Gay colors, also black and white; in net, silk crepes, satin.

• • • •

PAQUIN—Shirtwaist stylings; simple lines; lace or embroidery trimming; capelets; slightly flared skirts; solid colors and prints. Silk, satin, organdy, taffeta, crepe, linen. Practically all costumes for day and evening are belted.

Heels for Spring.

Heels for early spring will be the same as last year, from 2 to 2½ inches in height. The 1 and 1½-inch "wedge" heel models, taken from Italy, are being shown. "Clogs"—with 2-inch soles and 5-inch heels—have been introduced by leading designers for evening wear.

By Molyneux. By Maggy Rouff.

SCHIAPARELLI fills pockets and handbags with flowers and uses jewel-buttoned gaiters instead of gloves! The material is white satin draped in 1912 manner. HEIM styles a dress like a suit, in daisy printed crepe with navy jacket-bodice. PATOU fashions a striking evening gown in printed taffeta; shades of pink, mauve, gray and green. MOLYNEUX'S 1938 crinoline gown in oyster white grosgrain silk; silver sequins divide skirt in three parts. Note mittens and fan. MAGGY ROUFF dramatizes a black morocain basque bodice with lattice work, over pale pink and white. Black profile hat by Le Monnier.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, March 27.

WHEN MRS. HORTENSE ODLUM took over her duties as presiding deity of a large and famous Fifth avenue store a few days ago, she started from absolute scratch. She was then the wife of Floyd B. Odlum, the financial wizard, and had no more practical experience as a merchant than you or I. This may sound almost tragically paradoxical—a woman utterly innocent of the tricks of trade setting up as a big league store keeper.

ALICE HUGHES

But it wasn't as dangerous as it sounds. Mrs. Odlum was smart enough to know that by spreading plenty of cash judiciously, she could surround herself with top-drawer merchants to run the big deals and the vital trifles of the business. And in one respect her adventure was actually refreshing, for Mrs. Odlum has had plenty of experience on the other side of the counter as a customer, and a very good one, since the Odiums have long been well off. Thus she brought much of the patron's viewpoint into the office, and wanted to learn more of it.

So she started what she calls the "consumer group" of her store, a group of 60 women of various sorts and strata. With them she consults now and then at a luncheon meeting to find out what the customer is thinking. I always make it a point to be present at these affairs, and sometimes they are extremely interesting and always amusing. There's the danger that the 60 girls may become sort of semi-professional store keepers themselves, unless Mrs. Odlum keeps infusing new patron blood. Only last week I went to such a talk-and-munch, and got many a chuckle at the difference between that gathering and a group of high-geared business girls. The latter could cover a whole season of store problems and style stunts in two hours. But the "consumer group" took one little thought and wrestled with it from one to three. One woman asked "Why do many dresses have high necklines?" The girls batted this trifle back and forth until I had to leave at three! I doubt that this meeting helped the store or Mrs. Adlum very much, but I certainly hope it settled the epochal "high neckline" matter for all time!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The fashion show epidemic, now about whipped for the spring season, is a fairly grim thing, but now and then it does produce one good high-pitched giggle, or even hearty laugh. One of the best came a few days ago. The gaudy affair was winding up in the traditional way—a luscious bride trailing down the runway in all her finery. Suddenly a photographer leaped forward to her very feet and fired his flashlight. But it was one of those faulty flash bulbs, and the durn thing exploded with quite a roar. Helen Cornelius, the fashion editor, was sitting next to me when the bomb went off. "Sh," said Helen, "an old-fashioned shotgun wedding!"

• • • •

Lorraine Manville, roofing heiress who once performed in musical comedy and even married a leading juvenile, is just celebrating the first anniversary of her present happy marriage to Comrade Cornelius Dresselhuys. Lorraine is another rich American who has given up her native citizenship, a la Babs Hutton. But it was not a double-tax matter that caused blonde Lorraine to become a Dutch subject. Imagine the problems besetting an American gal married to a Holander and living in England. Hotsa! Talk about an international complication!

• • • •

The damp and dull March days have been brightened here by the presence of the gorgeous Vera Zorina, whom you may have seen in Mr. Goldwyn's Follies. She's had the town beaux puffing and stomping, and is certainly a beautiful and talented creature. She's rehearsing now in a show called "I Married an Angel," in a part for which Marlene Dietrich was once cautiously mentioned—but will have to go back to Hollywood in June. And the town blades will have to find someone else to huff about.

• • • •

If you just ache all over for a new kind of greeting card, you might try the little phonograph disc, which will utter a sentiment if scratched with a sharp point. It will probably say something novel and thrilling like "I Love You, I Love You"—or is this where you came in?

• • • •

Mrs. Odlum's consumer group (see above) has come to bat with a helpful hint. Why shouldn't stores and dressmakers have a fashion show for women who are middle-aged models. Why not, inpresenting good clothes on good middle-aged models. Fhy not, indeed? We can't all be gorgeous size-12 mannequins of the sort we see at fashion shows! Mrs. Odlum has something there!

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Tea in Utopia.

A COMPLETE overhauling of the social institution known as the "large tea" is promised by Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, founder of the recently organized Do Something About It League.

While reluctant to be quoted on the subject, Mrs. DeGoofey admitted this would be the first major reform her league would undertake.

"You may say this much," she said, "—and by the way, don't forget that the G in Goofey is capitalized—that in response to a flood of letters, many of them from hapless men victims who have been dragged to these mob teas, we have decided to do something about the deplorable conditions existing at these events."

"Just what laws will you have passed?" Mrs. DeGoofey was asked.

"We will not seek legislation—just yet," she replied. We are approaching the problem by way of science. Our laboratories are now working on several inventions that may revolutionize teas and even cocktail parties."

"What are some of those inventions?"

Seraphims Over The Tea Tables.

"Well, I will tell you strictly off the record, since we don't want the Germans or Japanese to get wind of this, that one is a collapsible seat, probably of cellophane, that may be carried in the handbag and set up at one spot where the tea-goer may be marooned. We are also working on some electric wings that a hostess, in event of a crush, may dispense to part of her guests so they may ascend to higher levels—that is physically speaking."

"What about a photograph of yourself, Mrs. DeGoofey, with these wings and—say a cup of tea?"

"No, I am averse to personal publicity. Besides, the wings are not yet ready. However we have some simpler inventions including a pocket megraphone to be used in making introductions also in shouting down other tea-goers; some orthopedic shoes in satin and gold leaf, and a small decorative screen about a foot high to be placed in front of the hostess and others in reception lines so they may kick off their shoes."

"What about the cigaret situation, Mrs. DeGoofey."

Ash Tray Decorations For Bosoms.

"We have just perfected a beautiful little chromium ash tray to be hooked on the bosom like a lorgnette. We are also developing it in embossed gold silver and bronze so that it will resemble a medal. Another invention in which you may be interested is a long prodding fork something like those used by the early Puritans to awaken sleepers in church. This will be used on important dowagers who hold up reception lines to have long confabs with the hostess or guest of honor. However, our most important invention is the 'lend a hand.'"

"What is that?"

"It is a device being manufactured for us by an artificial limb company. It is affixed at the elbow in such a way that it will enable the tea-goer to meet the problem of manipulating simultaneously a plate with sandwiches and salad, a cup of tea, a fork, a spoon and a handbag?"

"Have you any other reform plans?"

"Yes, indeed. We are offering a beautiful prize—a combination electric bread slicer, sandwich cutter, mayonnaise mixer and butter spreader—to the person submitting the best general name to be used in making introductions. It should be something 'Umph' or 'Pumpf' or 'Poof'—any combination of sounds that will sound like everybody's name and yet like nobody's. We feel it would save a great deal of nerve strain if tea-goers were spared the necessity of understanding or remembering names and merely referred to each other as 'Mrs. Umph-Umph' or something similar. Don't you think the possibilities are fascinating?"

Watercress Sandwiches On Taboo List.

"Yes, indeed. Any other plans, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"Well, we may seek legislation to abolish water-cress sandwiches, oozy cookies and drippy ice creams and perhaps to require more potted palms so that guests may more easily dispose of their toothpicks after eating shrimps. And ultimately we may seek the abolishment of the large tea by constitutional amendment. My own feeling about it are that such gatherings are definitely unnecessary and uncivilized."

"Now that's an interesting idea, Mrs. DeGoofey! Could you elaborate further?"

"Not now. I'm in a hurry as I have an appointment with the caterer and the florist. Then I'm seeing a harpist——"

"Are YOU having a party, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"Yes, I'm giving a large tea."

"A large tea! But I thought you didn't approve of them."

"I don't. Only—well, you see, there have been so many people who have been nice to me . . ."

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHETHER you join the Easter parade along Fifth avenue or Main street, you must prune your curves to cut a fine figure in your smart new clothes.

Of course, you cannot take off that extra 20 pounds in a mere three weeks, but you can be 6 pounds slimmer and 3 inches trimmer by Easter. Just that much spring pruning can make you feel positively svelte!

Exercise will do more for your figure in a short time than diet. You probably need special exercises to take a double tuck in the waist, snip an inch or two off the hips and spruce up your posture . . . but let's find out. The tape will tell you the exact measurements that need trimming.

Let's begin with the waistline, for without a well-defined waistline no figure can be lovely. The waistline should be 7 to 9 inches less than the bust measurement, and if you have only a 5-inch difference, 2 inches off can make you almost streamlined.

It is so easy to slim down the waistline that you will wonder why you ever let it wander. Stretching and twisting exercises pull and squeeze the waistline roll until there is nothing left but a slim middle. Here is one of the easiest of the stretching exercises:

MOVEMENT: Keeping the upper part of the back as flat as possible on the floor, cross the left leg over the right and touch the toes to the floor. This gives you a diagonal stretch. Now change position and cross the right leg over, having the right arm stretched overhead on floor. Repeat six times, changing position each time.

Rolling is the best emergency measure for smoothing and firming the hipline.

Roll from side to side, not over and over. Concentrate the pressure of the roll on the largest part of the hipline. For some figures the roll is most effective from a lying down position and for others from a half-sitting position. Roll on a blanket or thin mat on the floor. A hard surface does not yield to bulges and is better for the figure. To smooth out lumps on the side of hip and thigh, roll away over on the thighline, then back to the other thighline.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

OF THEE I SING: Of Mrs. Jimmy Roosevelt dropping in at her husband's White House office for a moment before lunch . . . Of Bill Shearer, the big Navy enthusiast, lunching in the House restaurant with Maj. Gen. Tom Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps, and Col. Joe Fegan, who flew to Puerto Rico with Lieut. Col. Jimmy Roosevelt . . . Of Mrs. Robert Lowe Bacon's dining room, which she complains will seat only 24, or is it 32. (Oh, well, small parties are nicer.)

Mrs. Bob Bacon
. . . only 32 seats

A good example of how quickly an apt pupil acquires senatorial mannerisms is jaunty, ebullient Senator Ellender, of Louisiana . . . In less than 15 months he has adopted the ambulatory, peripatetic oratorical style . . .

As he speaks he roves about, sometimes covering nearly a mile in zigzag sorties during a short speech . . . He also teeters with the best of them as he orates, from heel to toe, and bows commandingly from the waist, driving a point home with extended finger.

Dixie still produces the more kinetic orators.

A knotty legal problem has popped up at the Supreme Court, and the justices are the boys to settle it . . .

"—can the Supreme Court o. k. love?"

She decided that she would like to have Justice McReynolds, one of the two bachelor justices, perform the ceremony, when and if . . . It was a little out of his line (which recently has been minority opinions), yet he was not unwilling . . . But he voiced some uncertainty that a justice of the Supreme Court can perform a marriage . . . It may be necessary to ask the Attorney General for an opinion.

That regular Army major who announced the aristocratic First Troop of Philadelphia's National Guard during their recent visit to Washington as composed entirely of "gentlemen of affluence" wasn't stricken by awe of their wealth . . .

He was merely quoting from the honorable discharge of the original troop, at the end of the Revolutionary War, in George Washington's own handwriting. (In those days affluence wasn't a sin.)

* * * *

Some of the most outrageous stories about President Roosevelt are told by his most ardent admirers . . . They have ceased to be indignant about the tales coined about him, and regard them merely as exercises in unharnessed imagination . . .

It is a proud boast of his friends that they can fashion more incredible tales about him and the White House than can his enemies.

"—the baleful temptation"

There is a baleful temptation to be the first to tell a new story on the White House which few can resist . . . This temptation is slightly analogous to the urge that a small boy feels to throw a snowball at a derby or silk hat . . .

The latest tale involves a visit to the White House by a fellow stamp collector, and it leaves even economic royalists gasping with incredulity.

CAPITAL CURIOS: The one-ton gilded frames on second-rate paintings at the Capitol . . . The planked shad and roe at the Senate restaurant for 75 cents, and the whole broiled lobster at the House dining room for 65 cents . . . The Congressman who wears a gray cutaway suit in the spring, a white linen cutaway in summer.

The ado about the Japanese cherry blossoms has momentarily drowned out the war din in the Capital . . . Washingtonians are phoning friends a thousand miles away to catch a plane and swoop in for a glimpse of the giant wreaths of pink and white blooms which rim the Tidal Basin and Hains Point . . .

The single blossoms have reached their climax, and the pinker double blossoms are opening, miles and miles of them . . .

And in the midst of the hullabaloo one of Washington's sagacious taxi drivers tells me the cherry trees should be uprooted and magnolias planted in their place, as a symbol of peace.

Rival Leaders Fight Verbal Labor Duel

A. F. L. Officers Ignore Rank and File, Union Group Is Told.

The two wings of organized labor were alternately branded as ineffective, undemocratic and solely responsible for splitting American workers in a three-hour verbal battle fought yesterday by Charles P. Howard, secretary of the C. I. O., and Frank Morrison, secretary-treasurer of the A. F. of L.

Invited to speak in Masonic Temple Auditorium by Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, the two labor leaders presented their arguments before a partisan audience of 300 which reflected its sharp division of opinion by applause, derisive laughter and brief bursts of booing.

Howard claimed an enrollment of "nearly 4,000,000" for the C. I. O., while paid up A. F. of L. membership was put at 3,529,000 by Morrison.

Members Gained.

"The A. F. of L. has admittedly gained members since the C. I. O. went to work," said Howard, whose prominence in C. I. O. councils has excited fear he might attempt to withdraw from the A. F. of L. the International Typographical Union, of which he is president.

"But the recent increase in A. F. of L. membership comes entirely from firms where employers are running away from the C. I. O.," he charged. "And if we were employers, we would do the same thing—encourage ineffective unions for our workers."

There would be no controversy between the two labor groups, Howard contended, if A. F. of L. chiefs permitted democratic expression of opinion among the rank-and-file.

Conventions Ignored.

"Federation officials have developed the habit of ignoring decisions of the conventions," he said. "The executive council was afraid the large minority for industrial organization at the Atlantic City convention would become a majority at the Tampa convention, so their solution was to suspend nearly 1,000,000 members of the A. F. of L."

"That suspension is responsible for the breach in American labor. The C. I. O. wants peace, but not at the price of its right to collective bargaining."

Asserting that "the destructive activities of the C. I. O. have exerted a wholly baneful influence on American labor," Morrison said the C. I. O. "disregarded its avowed purpose of educating workers for industrial unionism and proceeded to organize without heed of existing jurisdictions and in spite of the ruling of two A. F. of L. conventions."

Suggests New Name.

Howard countered by suggesting a new name for the C. I. O. "It might have saved a lot of trouble," he said, "if we had called ourselves a "Committee for Education." That's all it was and all it is today."

The steel strike of 1919 and the railroad shop trades strike in 1922 were cited by Morrison as proof the A. F. of L. can take effective action in a labor dispute, despite C. I. O. charges that questions of jurisdiction and high dues prevent any organization of mass-production workers.

"This is not the first time America has known a dual labor movement," Morrison pointed out. "We had the Knights of Labor, American Railway Union and Industrial Workers of the World."

"But these are only memories today, and now we have the self-appointed Committee for Industrial Organization. It is the idea of a few men willing to set up a dictatorship and gamble at the expense of the whole labor movement. The C. I. O. will fade out of the picture too," Morrison concluded.

Boys Club Gives Physical Tests to 25 Youths a Day

Physical examinations are being given to an average of 25 boys daily under auspices of the Boys Club of Washington, Dr. George Dewey, chairman of the health department committee, reported at the last meeting of the board of trustees at the Army and Navy Club.

Visiting hours at the new Southeast Branch of the Boys Club, Seventeenth and Massachusetts avenue southeast, are from 1 to 2:30 p. m., Monday to Friday, inclusive, it was announced. Quota of new members is for the present, 400 per month, with 100 applicants to be accepted in each of the four classes: midgets, juniors, intermediates and seniors.

Frank R. Jelleff, president, appointed the following committees: House—Alvin W. Hall, general chairman; Southeast Branch, Joseph Gammel, chairman, Curtis McCalip, A. F. E. Horn; Central Branch, William E. Russell, chairman, Henry Schaffert, Harry Allen; Northeast Branch, George J. Cleary, chairman, Harry White, Ray G. Dunne; Georgetown Branch, S. Percy Thompson, chairman, Albert E. Conradis, Roland Whitehurst.

Public relations—Charles Cooke, chairman, James A. Dent, Henry W. Draper, Joseph D. Kaufman, Edgar Morris and Wash. B. Williams; Camp—Sidney L. Hechinger, chairman, Foster M. Reeder, Dr. William Chase, A. Lee Thompson, Charles H. Pardoe.

Lithuania Is Held 'Just as Well Off'

More than 100 Lithuanians, who last week learned of their homeland's capitulation to a Polish ultimatum, were told last night that the country had progressed little in the past 30 years and was "probably just as well off under present conditions." The speaker, at a meeting in the music hall of Catholic University, was Louis Bean, Lithuanian-born economist.

The meeting, arranged by the Baltic-American Society of Washington in co-operation with the Travelers Club of the university, was also addressed by Nadas Rastenis, attorney and poet of Baltimore.

Lithuanian songs were sung by Clement V. Andrews, assisted by the Lithuanian Choral Society of Baltimore. Rare Lithuanian stamps were displayed by Dr. Ellis Haworth, professor of science at Wilson Teachers College, and a display of amber jewelry was presented by Sidney Bertram.

Bullitt, 'Stalled' In Plane, Assails D.C. Air Facilities

After circling Washington Airport and Bolling Field 15 minutes last night in an Eastern Airlines plane before the pilot slipped in to land between gusts of wind, William C. Bullitt, ambassador to France, termed the Capital's landing facilities "disgraceful." He was on his way to New York after spending three days at Warm Springs, Ga., with President Roosevelt.

Bullitt declined to discuss these conferences beyond saying the President is "in perfect health." He said he did not know when he would return to France, but that his "vacation" expires July 19.

"In France," he said, "I can talk my head off. But over here I have to keep my mouth shut."

The plane circled Washington Airport several times and headed for Bolling Field when an 18-mile northwest wind was reported. Just as the pilot was preparing to land at Bolling, he was informed the wind had shifted to 15 miles an hour straight down the runway at Washington Airport and returned to make his landing there.

"This is a disgraceful situation," Bullitt said. "I've never heard of a pilot flying round a national capital's airport 15 minutes because he couldn't get into it. What's the trouble here, anyway?"

3 From Training School Caught Near Annapolis

Three youths who escaped from the National Training School for Boys Saturday were captured near Annapolis Md., last night by Anne Arundel County police.

At Annapolis the trio was charged with stealing an automobile and with housebreaking. Police said the youths stole a car from White Marsh, in Prince Georges County, afterward abandoning it. They were also accused of having broken into a cottage at Beverly Beach and of having stolen food, clothing and a shotgun from the home of Mrs. Susan Leach, near there.

1,000 D. C. Greeks Celebrate 117 Years of Nation's Liberty

50 Children Clad in Peasant and Soldier Costumes Pose in Tableaux Dramatizing Fight for Freedom in 1821.

Yesterday was the Fourth of July for Washington's Greek population. Young and old poined with their fellows across the sea in celebratin the 117th anniversary of Gree kindependence.

The young were particularly prominent in local festivities. Fifty school children, dressed in native costumes, took part in a mass meeting at Central High Schol. The little girls wore peasant dresses and the boys appeared in the full-skirted white uniforms, red fezzes and black moustaches of Greek soldiers.

Before an audience of nearly 1,000, the children sang songs of the homeland and posed in tableaux dramatizing Greece's fight for freedom, won in 1821.

Speakers on the program were Constantin Economon, supreme secretary of the Order of Ahepa, and Achilles Caisonis, past supreme president of the order. Speaking in Greek, both expressed gratitude to the United States for the support given Greece by this country more than 100 years ago.

The ceremonies opened with a brief religious service at which the Rev. A. Lalousias, pastor of St. Sophia Church, officiated.

John Chrysostomon, principal of the St. Sophia parochial school, directed the children's portion of the program. Chairman of arrangements was Assimakis Sioris. His assistants were Soterios Nicholson, Dr. Charles J. Demas, James Mallos, P. Creticson, K. Photiades, and George Papadeas.

Bethesda Police Catch 30 'Blossom' Speeders

A police drive against speeders combined with heavy traffic yesterday netted 30 arrests at Bethesda, Md. Four officers in scout cars trapped most of the speeders as they headed along Wisconsin avenue toward Washington and the cherry blossoms. Usually, there are not more than five or six arrests for speeding in Bethesda on Sunday, police said.

Reynolds Alien Bill To Be Forum Topic

The Reynolds immigration bill, providing for deportation of criminal aliens, will be discussed tonight at 8 o'clock at a forum sponsored by the Democratic Women's National Council, 1500 Rhode Island avenue.

Representative Joseph Starnes, of Alabama, will speak on the bill as a means of ousting immigrants who preach subversive doctrines.

D. C. Gaming Bill Buried, Pastor Says

Rev. J. E. Briggs Assails Rep. Palmisano and House Committee.

Holds Efforts to Make Washington Decent Are Blocked.

The House District Committee and its chairman, Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, were targets of the Rev. John E. Briggs, D. D., in a sermon on gambling at Fifth Baptist Church. A bill to outlaw the numbers racket, indorsed by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, he pointed out, has twice passed the Senate and has been buried in the House District Committee until recently.

"It seems unfortunate," he said, "that the chairman of our District Committee seems to try his best to block every effort of the moral element who want to see Washington a decent, God-fearing and God-serving community."

Gambling, Dr. Briggs said, "is a practice evil in itself, because it is born of avarice and covetousness and the desire to get something for nothing and that, too, at another's expense.

"It undermines self-reliance and leads to defeat and despair because fortune is fickle and luck will turn."

At St. Aloysius

An appeal for the "corporative system" and co-operation between employer and employe was expressed yesterday by the Rev. John J. O'Connor, S. J., speaking on "Peace, Capital and Labor" at St. Aloysius' Church.

The "prime evil," the maldistribution of wealth and property, might be overcome, Father O'Connell suggested, if employers and industrialists treated their employes as "brothers" and recognized their "natural right to form unions and to obtain a living family wage."

Father O'Connell asked, "would not this same spirit of co-operation impel first our own Catholic employers and employes and then all the rest to make a trial of the corporative system into industry — that system in which employer and employe are represented in a council for each industry and each industry in both its elements is represented in a supreme council to plan industry as a whole?"

At Luther Place

Man, "in his stupidity and greed," has allowed millions to starve in the midst of plenty, declared Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen at Luther Place Memorial Church yesterday.

Dr. Rasmussen asserted man attempts to evade responsibilities by trusting God to carry out duties which, in reality, humanity cannot escape. "Today," he said, "thousands of men pray for peace, but there the effort stops, for they expect God to do the rest."

At St. Paul's

The church of today is opposed by forces more dangerous than since the year 325, and is almost helpless in the face of a great mass movement of anti-Christian forces, a congregation at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek Parish, was warned yesterday by Dr. Alexander Zabriskie.

Asserting that "the authoritarian state has more power to destroy Christianity than it ever had," Dr. Zabriskie said "these anti-Christian forces are 'missionary' to the core, and consequently spreading, and growing in their influence."

Swedish Congregation

Declaring that "love, mercy, and faith in God will endure after everything else has perished," Dr. Knute E. Carlson urged a Swedish congregation meeting at the First Baptist Church, to "strive for the things that endure to everlasting life, rather than for the material things that can so easily be taken away."

Werrenrath Traces, Sings Song History

Tells Town Hall Audience of Wigwam, Tin Pan Alley Creations.

Town Hall followers last night swung away from their normal consideration of world problems to hear Reinald Werrenrath sing American songs and tell about their history.

The 55-year-old barytone, speaking without a microphone, traced a dramatic story of the songs that have come out of America, from the Indian wigwams to tin pan alley. Between notes on the songs and the men who wrote them, Werrenrath sang examples, familiar melodies and lesser known songs that he has found during nearly 40 years on the concert stage.

Out of the history and music, he turned Town Hall into an evening at home, around a piano, and at the close he sent many of the audience from the theater humming tunes they had heard.

Danny Deever Sung.

The last song they heard was "Sylvia," an encore requested from the floor, and chosen by the singer over an insistent call from the audience for "Doona." Earlier in the program there was "Danny Deever," arranged by Walter Damrosch, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," back to "My Days Have Been So Wondrous Free," written by Francis Hopkinson, signer of the Declaration of Independence, at the age of 18.

The latter, like all the songs, drew a burst of applause, but Werrenrath said it was "not so very good." He described it as a "pale gray imitation of Elizabethan songs written 200 years earlier," but pointed out that it was the first known song written by a native white American.

MacDowell "Greatest."

Werrenrath devoted major emphasis to the work of three men, Stephen Foster as "the originator of popular songs in America," Edward MacDowell as "the greatest American composer," and Deems Taylor, "the white hope of American music today." The speaker offered to meet anyone who disagreed with his estimate of Taylor "out in the alley," adding that he and Taylor roomed together in college for three years.

He sang a private ballad by Taylor, following it with "Without a Song," by Vincent Youmans. He added brief tributes to George Gershwin, Victor Herbert, John Philip Sousa, George M. Cohan and Irving Berlin.

Werrenrath said, "I am proud that these songs are written by Americans and that they are American."

Autopsy Reveals Mrs. Landis Died Of Head Injuries

The death of Mrs. Blanche Gertrude Landis, 22-year-old estranged wife of a District fireman, resulted from head injuries suff red Thursday when she was beaten on a lonely road in northeast Washington, an autopsy revealed yesterday.

Funeral services for Mrs. Landis, who died Saturday in Casualty Hospital, will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow in St. Anthony's Church by Msgr. Peter Guilday. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Meanwhile, James Landis, husband of the dead woman, was held at the Ninth Precinct police station awaiting a coroner's inquest at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow.

House to Air Group Health Charge Today

Medical Society's Peace Offer Won't Affect Inquiry Plea.

Charges that the District Medical Society has endangered the lives of Government employes and conspired against the practice of co-operative medicine will be received today by the House of Representatives as the latest move in the bitter fight between partisans of the Group Health Association and organized doctors of Washington.

Demands for Congressional investigation into both the local Medical Society and the American Medical Association will not be affected by an olive branch extended Saturday to G. H. A. supporters by the District Medical Society, it was said last night.

"Our petition to Congress was already in the mail when we received news of the Medical Society's letter offering 'unqualified co-operation,' declared A. C. Edwards, secretary of the Washington Committee for Co-operative Medical Service, militant backers of G. H. A.

Lives Held Endangered.

The committee, which claims to voice the opinions of "approximately 50,000 Federal employes," charged in its petition that conduct of the Medical Society and of directors "of certain local hospitals" "has already jeopardized the lives of several employes of the Government and, if continued, will result in grave injury to the health and property of some 2,600 Government employes and their families."

Dissolution of the medical society, opening of Government hospitals to G. H. A. members, regulations forbidding "monopolization" of local hospitals by the District Medical Society, and legislation preventing physicians from blocking the G. H. A. were among the suggestions advanced in the petition.

Inquiry Requested.

Investigation into activities of the American Medical Association "in attempting to stamp out co-operative group health organizations and practices" throughout the United States was also requested.

Carging the District Medical Society with unfair discrimination against doctors who have signed contracts with the G. H. A., the petition alleges that the officers of the society, the staffs of hospitals who are members of the society and superintendents of hospitals acting under their direction aim "to destroy G H. A. by preventing it from performing its obligations to those Federal employes who are its members."

Conspiracy Charged.

The petition lists five separate cases of alleged conspiracy of officers of the medical society or hospital staffs or against the Group Health Association.

Representative Scott (Democrat), of California, is expected to introduce a resolution for congressional inquiry today.

The letter from President Thomas E. Neill of the District Medical Society congratulating the Washington Committee for Co-operative Medical Service on its formation, was described by a member of the society last night as "in line with our policy to co-operate with lay groups."

Pacific Natives Create Trouble For Hollywood

Hawaiians and Malayans Impose Problems That Are Hard to Meet.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, March 27.—Clyde Elliott, the producer-director, emerged from nine months of rain in the Malaysian jungles today with 250,000 feet of film, from which he will piece together perhaps the most completely unpublicized movie of the year.

It is called "Booloo," and the reason you haven't heard about it before is because Elliott was too busy fighting pythons and arguing with temperamental natives to be writing any letters home to Paramount.

With a safari of 70 men, including Colin Tapley, his only white actor, Elliott chopped his way through the jungles toward the border of Siam. Most of the picture was shot on the banks of the Plus (as in arithmetic) River.

The story has Tapley, a British explorer, hunting for an Albino tiger.

"The natives think the white tiger is the ghost of their medicine man, and they oppose the hunt," said Elliott, who wrote the scenario himself. "But he finally catches it, by using himself as bait. He's about to be executed, when his life is saved by the heroine.

A New Star.

"She is a native girl named Suratna Asmara. She does a good job of acting, but I surely had to pay her well. She wouldn't work in the film until I promised to hire 41 of her relatives. I hired 'em, all right, and she did fine. She did so fine, in fact, that I wanted to bring her to Hollywood and see if I couldn't turn her into a new kind of movie star. She said she'd come if I'd bring the relatives, too. So she remains in Malaysia, and the world loses an actress."

Elliott said that 200 inches of rain per year falls in that part of the jungle in which he worked and that most of the year's supply seemed to fall while he was there.

"We even had a flood which seemed worse than the one Hollywood had last month," he said. "It washed away all our canned goods, and for weeks we had to depend on our native hunters for food. They provided only two staple articles of diet.

"One was python steaks.

"The other was monkey stew.

"They shot the pythons with poisoned arrows, chopped them in slices and made steaks which they broiled. The meat wasn't bad in flavor, but it was mighty tough. The monkey stew was not so good. The natives prepared it like they would a beef stew, but the flavor was mighty, mighty strong."

More "Native" Trouble.

Another movie man who's having a little native trouble is Harry Owens, the orchestra leader from Hawaii, who won an academy award for his song "Sweet Leilanie."

Young Owens, who was on his uppers four years ago when he got a cable to go to Honolulu as musical director of the Royal Hawaiian Hotel, generally is credited with being responsible, almost single-handed, for the recent craze over Hawaiian music.

He did the trick by orchestrating old Hawaiian songs so that ballroom clients could dance to them.

"Things were going fine," he said, "when our baby was born. We gave her a Hawaiian name—Leilanie. It means 'flower of heaven.' One Sunday afternoon I knocked off a lullaby for her and I called it 'Sweet Leilanie.' Her mother still sings her to sleep with that tune."

Eventually the song was published. Bing Crosby sang it in a movie last year and Owens suddenly found himself an international musical celebrity. Paramount gave him a job playing the music in a current picture, "Cocoanut Grove"—and that's where Owens' native trouble is concerned.

Orchestra Is Homesick.

He brought his 17 piece Hawaiian orchestra with him. It's membership included only six white men. The rest were Hawaiians, who previously had worked at such prosaic tasks as cutting sugar cane, sacking onions, driving taxis, and whatnot. Alvin Kaleolani, his guitar-player, for instance, was a motor cop, husband of a Chinese woman, father of ten children, and deeply religious.

"They're all fine boys," Owens said. "But they took no chances on being shanghaied. They insisted I buy their return tickets before they'd even leave the islands. Now that the picture's finished, I've had offers to play in numerous American cities, and even in London—and I can't do it. My orchestra is homesick. I have persuaded the boys to accept a few weeks' engagement here at the Beverly-Wilshire Hotel and I may get them to take up an offer we have to play in San Francisco.

"Then its back to the islands for all of us, whether I like it or not—though of course I do."

Little

The Warner Brothers' imposing picturization of Hervey Allen's monumental novel of "Anthony Adverse," slightly abridged, to be sure, but still intact in all its salient features, is revived this week as chief screen feature of the new bill at the Little Theater.

In appraisin the dramatic worth of this heroic work, scarcely more is necessary than to name the distinguished roster of principals who participate in its enactment. These include such cinema artists of the first rank as Fredric March, in the title role; Olivia de Havilland, Edmund Gwen, the eminent British star, last seen with Robert Taylor in "A Yank at Oxford;" Claude Rains, recently of "Gold Where You Find It," and before that in "They Won't Forget;" Anita Louise, Louis Hayward, Gale Sondergaard, Steffi Duna, Billy Mauch, one of the identical twins; Donald Woods, Akim Tamiroff, Ralph Morgan, Henry O'Neill, Pedro de Cordoba, George E. Stone, Luis Alberni, Fritz Leiber, Rafaela Ottiano, Leonard Mudie, J. Carroll Naish, Frank Reicher, Addison Richards.

The major feature, despite its length and the fullness of its drama, is augmented by short reel subjects and a new release of the newsreel.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Abandoned Practice of Leading Stars Has Robbed First Nights of Intimacy and Camaraderie; Cab Calloway Bringing New Dance to Capital; Columbia Pictures Steps Out; Notes of the Theater.

WHAT ever has become of that ancient symbol of stellar eminence on the stage known as the curtain speech?

There was a time within the memory of those who still totter down to their orchestra stalls in the wake of the usher's trail-blazing flashlight, who remember when the curtain speech was one of the prime items of interest and amusement on opening nights in the theater, and, more often than not, on every night thereafter during the engagement of the given attraction. In these later days this all seems to have gone by the board—whatever that may mean.

BELL.

This is, or ought to be, a subject of lament among the veterans of the theater. And on both sides of the footlights. There was something about a curtain speech—usually delivered at the end of the second or third act, depending upon the length of the play—that spread an aura of genial camaraderie over the playhouse that has been sorely missing for these many seasons now.

I recall particularly the maniacal monologues that used to be delivered across the footlights by the late Raymond Hitchcock, one of musical comedy's foremost funsters and an inveterate ad libber who was habituated to the rebel custom of getting his casts all tangled up in their appointed tasks by straying far from the lines, the "business" and the cues of the piece in which he might be appearing. A curtain speech from the jawney-haired Mr. Hitchcock was as inevitable as the overture or the exit march. Usually his "impromptu" entr'acte remarks were the most carefully rehearsed portion of his performance. They were unfailingly intimate and witty.

One season, Mr. Hitchcock, the inimitable "Hitchy," as he was popularly and affectionately dubbed, dedicated his curtain bration to a satiric "ribbing" of the late Billy Sunday, the "sawdust trail" evangelist-graduate from the professional baseball diamond, in the integrity of whose evangelical pursuits "Hitchy" reposed small confidence. The gist of this ex-cathedra exposition of the Hitchcock point of view was that the stage star didn't begrudge the former baseball player the applause and the monetary returns he was deriving from his spectacular form of religious rehabilitation of the wayward, because "this year he has a better show than I have." Billy Sunday did have a pretty good show that year. So did Raymond Hitchcock.

Going back a little further, that diminutive and devastating comic of an earlier era, Frank Daniels, also made his curtain talks gems of brittle wit and droll humor. Then there were those who were not always so funny—like the late Wilton Lackaye, for instance.

Mr. Lackaye, admirable actor that he was, was won't to berate his audiences for whatever shortcomings he deemed them to possess—and he usually deemed them to possess many. Once, at the old Columbia Theater, he launched a tirade against his own customers because a larger number of their neighbors had evidently gone to see Sarah Bernhardt, playing one of her innumerable "farewell appearances" in a rival house. Mr. Lackaye was addressing the wrong audience that night. Richard Bennett had a similar propensity for tongue-lashing his own patrons when those against whom his assaults should have been launched were sitting in other theaters.

Otis Skinner, Guy Bates Post, William Faversham and others of like standing I remember as artists who always were gracious in what they said in response to an audience's obvious enthusiasm over what might just have been performed upon the stage.

These informal intervals in the theater are acutely missed. They always served to strike up a little closer sympathy between actor and audience, it seemed to me, than otherwise might have been generated.

So I wonder why stars no longer step before the curtain and express themselves audibly? It would have been nice this season if Ethel Barrymore, Maurice Evans, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Clifton Webb and any number of others might have said a few words across the footlights to those they had entertained.

The only one who seems to "break down" these days is Noel Coward. And he only says a few graceful and well-chosen words expressive of probably only a part of what he feels.

I wonder why?

There is hi-de-ho in the offing. And not such a far-off offing, at that. Cab Calloway and His Cotton Club Orchestra will headline the stage bill at the Earle Theater, beginning Friday, April 8. A feature of Calloway's show this season is a new dance, set to a special musical number composed by Duke Ellington—of all competitive people! It is called the "Skrontch," if you can make any sense out of that. Having previously introduced "Truckin'", "Susie-Quing" and "Peckin'," the capricious and syncopated Calloway now brings forward the contention that the "Skrontch" will top them all. If it does, that will be somethin'.

It is that high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, who calls to this column's attention the degree to which Columbia Pictures is holding up its end as foremost of the independents.

It seems that "Golden Boy," Clifford Odets' stage play, now in its fifth month on Broadway, has become a Columbia cinema property. "You Can't Take It With You," the Pulitzer Prize play of 1937, opening in the National Theater tonight, also has been acquired by Columbia and shortly will go into production under the master hand of Director Frank Capra, the man who made "Lost Horizon." George Cukor, furthermore, is about on the last lap of Philip Barry's famous play of "Holiday," in which Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, Edward Everett Horton and Lew Ayres will appear in the principal screen roles.

Within three weeks a new picture will be started on the Columbia lot as a starring vehicle for Edward G. Robinson, now on view at the Metropolitan in "A Slight Case of Murder."

Irene Dunne, Carole Lombard, Jean Arthur, Joan Blondell and other top-ranking stars are among those who soon will be seen on the nation's silver sheet's under the Columbia trademark.

Columbia and Mr. Galanty seem to be doing all right.

So the gentlemen who arrange the screen previews for the edification for the guys and gals of the so-called Fourth Estate have gone into high—like the March wind that whipped the cherry blossoms around yesterday. Tomorrow an anticipatory squint at "The Girl of the Golden West" will be accorded the press. This is the chromatic version of the "straight" Belasco stage play in which Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy are to be seen and heard. On Wednesday, under the same Loew-M. G. M. auspices, there will be unspooled "The First Hundred Years"—you know what they are!—with Robert Montgomery and Virginia Bruce in the post positions, as Mr. Haight would say. Then on Wednesday night, in the auditorium of the National Press Club, the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "In Old Chicago" is to be unwound, for the first time in Washington, before an audience of approximately 1,000, including White House officials, members of the President's Cabinet, Senators, Congressmen and newspaper folk. Has anyone in the house a little clay and some straw in his pockets so we might toss out a few bricks between times?

Ol' Massa Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, a post he has occupied since a time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, is walking on air these past few days.

Marooned in Washington for several weeks by official duties as ranking executive of his national organization, Ol' Massa Ed has been practically pining away in an acute attack of nostalgia induced by a gnawing yearning for the beauties of his Mississippi plantation these early spring days. So instead of flying to Columbus, Miss., for a one-night stay, Massa Ed has brought "Pete," the real spirit of the plantation, to the National Capital.

"Pete" happens to be Mrs. Kuykendall. All quiet along the Potomac! That is, comparatively!

Please-Use-Tradesmen's-Entrance Note.

So that indefatigable young publicist, Ray Bell—no relation—sends around a two-pound box of coffee sweetening to celebrate the coming to the Capitol of Clyde McCoy and his Sugar Blues Orchestra. Not so hot. The sugar is O. K., but the implication is still there that it might be only a Domino game—if you know what I mean.

To Emblazon Next Week's Screens

STARS OF FILMS OPENING FRIDAY.
Above—Jeanette MacDonald, as she appears in "The Girl of the Golden West," a musicalized version of the original David Belasco stage success, in which she will be costarred with Nelson Eddy on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater next week. The young man on the burro seems to be Buddy Ebsen, also importantly cast in this new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. Inset—Robert Montgomery and Virginia Bruce, in the costellar roles of "The First Hundred Years," opening on the screen at Loew's Capitol this Friday. One suspects that the title means that they still "are the hardest!"

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, March 27.

TRAVEL DEPT.: Mark Eisner once again has become Tommy Manville's lawyer. Eisner sailed for Europe Wednesday on the Queen Mary. Just before the gangplank was lowered, Manville rushed aboard and reached his attorney . . . "While you're in Europe," he gasped, "I want you to do one thing for me" . . . "And what is that?" Eisner asked . . . "I want," his client stated, "I want you to look up some blondes for me. I've exhausted the American supply."

• • • •

FINANCE DEPT.: H. J. Yeats, president of Republic Films, revealed this. Last week he received an offer to purchase his movie company—an offer which would have netted the stockholders $1,000,000 profit . . . Yeats refused the offer—because it came from a group of Japanese industrialists.

• • • •

MUSIC DEPT.: The new issue of Life contains more than 20 pages of photographs exposing Nazi Germany. Included therein is a reproduction of the "Horst Wessel" song. In order to avoid any legal complications, Life had to pay 500 marks for permission to reproduce that song in its pages.

• • • •

FOREIGN DISPATCH. Dispatches from Vienna announced the arrest of Archduke Josef Ferdinand, nephew of Emperor Franz Josef, because of some unexplained insult to the Nazi regime. The insult was in this form: The aged archduke kept raising his arm, in the customary Nazi salute, whenever he was called upon to do so. But on the palm of his upraised hand was printed, in ink, a censorable phrase including the word "Kiss."

• • • •

RADIO DEPT.: Newspapers announced that Gertrude Lawrence had signed to broadcast with Eddie Cantor on a program sponsored by a cigarette company . . . Miss Lawrence will be reminded today that six months ago she signed a contract with a rival cigarette company, agreeing not to broadcast for any other brand within the next two years.

• • • •

LOCAL NEWS: Russell Crouse, the former columnist who now is in Hollywood writing scenarios, will conduct a Hollywood column for Pic magazine . . . Sally Rand is being sued by her press agent . . . The new five-suit bridge will be referred to henceforth as "Quintract" . . . College President Hutchins, of Chicago, now is one of the close contenders for the presidency of the N. Y. Stock Exchange . . . If Libby Holman quits the Cole Porter-Clifton Webb show, "You Never Know," Gloria Swanson will replace her.

• • • •

DRAMA DEPT.: The other day the drama class of the New Theater School, rehearsing in its quarters near Broadway, received instructions about "improvisation." "You're all pedestrians in a Chinese street," the teacher stated, "and it's just been bombed by the Japanese. Now act it out" . . . Shrieks of anguish and fear immediately emanated from the studio, as the class registered realistic horror. Their screams attracted a crowd downstairs, and a policeman immediately rushed to the sudio . . . "Never worry about any screams coming from this place," the instructor told the cop. "It's just acting. The noises here don't mean a thing." . . . "They don't, eh?" the bluecoat informed. "Well, this is the room where the Mischa Ross murder was committed last year."

• • • •

CRIME DEPT.: A veteran police official, now in the custodian department, went to his long-time friend, Mayor LaGuardia, and complained that a night spot had charged him $2.50 for a sandwich. He wanted the mayor to make official investigation and eliminate such places which victimize customers . . . The mayor directed the commissioner of accounts to investigate—not that restaurant, but the police official's bank accounts, stock holdings, etc. . . . and to report how it's possible for a common city employe to dine at a place which exacts such prices.

• • • •

GAME DEPT.: The Cavendish Club, one of the swankiest bridge clubs in America, now is negotiating to purchase the Crockford Club, another famous bridge club, and to rent the building . . . A clause in the contract now being discussed provides that one of the world's most famous bridge players is to be barred.

SOCIAL NOTES: At the Economics Club dinner Paul D. Cravath introduced James B. MacDonald and announced: "He is the head of the best-known and most effective association in the country" . . . He paused, turned to MacDonald, and whispered: "What's the name of the organization?" . . . MacDonald whispered the reply . . . Cravath straightened and continued: "the Foreign Policy Association."

Belasco

Fulfilling all of the management's expectations, based on the record of the film in other cities, "Mayerling," costarring Charles Boyer and that intensely ingenuous young French actress, Danielle Darrieux, continues to break box-office records at the Belasco Theater.

"Mayerling" is not a cheerful play, but it is an exceedingly interesting and well-acted one. It relates a story of royal frustration and the hopelessness of a great love, much as "Conquest" traced the pattern of another regal infatuation between Napoleon and the Duchess Marie Walewska. In this case, however, the principal figures are a hapless prince of the Hapsburgs and the Baroness Vetsera, who meet in the Prater, in Vienna, each unknown to the other, and become the victims of a grand passion that spells the doom of both.

Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux were judicious selections for the pivotal roles. Many will hold his Archduke Rudolph a less impressive portrayal than his Napoleon in "Conquest," but none can gainsay the skill of Charles Boyer as an actor of the first rank. It has already been said here of Mlle. Darrieux that she is one of the most proficient foreign stars that have been imported to this country. Ethereally beautiful, she also is an actress—despite her youth—who is able to imbue her characterizations with a profoundly moving sense of reality.

In HOLLYWOOD With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 27.—Luise Rainer took a look at herself in newsreels, and hied herself right into a beauty parlor for treatments and new hair-do. Even she was appalled at the way she looked at the Academy dinner.

HEDDA HOPPER.

"Frou Frou" or "The Toy Wife" are tentative titles of her new picture just gone into production. More titles coming up soon. I wonder if studios think changing the name of a picture during production gives it more publicity? Nobody gives a darn what I think, but I believe three or four changes only confuse and numb the public's interest. By what hallucinations could anyone switch from "The Pink Chemise" to "Come On Marines?" But Paramount achieved it, and released it under the latter title.

Luise is over her limpy look, too, and routs out her mother, Mrs. Heinz Rainer, at 7 in the morning for a swift walk on the beach before she dashes to the studio. She told me she thought "The Good Earth" the only really fine thing she's done on the screen, and that, by the way, is the only picture her mother has seen. Her mother, and husband, Clifford Odets, spend alternate days on the set with her.

She doesn't have a personal maid. A studio girl takes care of her. Luise is quite an eyeful in pink net over taffeta, very tight bodice, full skirt with bunches of roses on it. Around her throat a band of pink satin—one rose, topped by a red wig—soft little curls around the face.

Odets liked the proposal scene with Melvyn Douglas because, as I watched, he nodded his head gruffly several times. He also likes the story and told Luise so, which may account for his present sunny, sparkling disposition.

I asked Aunt Cissie how they liked working on "Kidnaped." "Oh, we loved it. Twentieth Century gave us a trailer dressing room and presented Freddie with a new football which he's so crazy about he takes it to bed with him."

I took quite a leap, mentally, from Luise to Freddie Bartholomew's set. But actually only covered a distance of a few feet. Freddie's doing "Lord Jeff," and they'd better hurry up and put that millstone around his neck if they want to keep him from growing, because he's twice the height he was when he arrived here. Nearly a head taller than his Aunt Cissie.

His voice is the funniest. It changes from tenor to basso in one sentence. He is never quite prepared when it slips into low gear—then the sceen has to be done over. Then, too, the gold brace back of his teeth wiggled during a close-up and they took time out to remove it.

Keep your eyes open for a new English boy, aged 9, also in "Lord Jeff." His name is Terry Kilbourne. And he's Robert Donat's protege. It's Terry's first picture. You know, in England children under 14 can't appear in pictures. Wouldn't we be in a bad way if that law ruled here. He gives imitations of everyone from Charles Laughton to Disraeli, by way of the Duke of Windsor. He's very like Freddie was when he first arrived. And definitely has star dust in his eyes.

I wanted to see Mickey Rooney, who's in the picture, too. But he was out chasing Fannie Brice, trying to date her up for dinner at the Troc.

Gayety

"COOPER'S BLACK AND WHITE REVUE." The Independent Burlesque Association presents the musical production in two acts and 20 scenes, featuring Charles "Red" Marshall and Murray Leonard, supported by Harry Clexx, Jack Lamont, Ruth Donald, Marie Voe, and Sahji. Dance numbers devised by Frank Bryant; staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Art John, B. C. A. A.

Two great shows combined in one is what Manager Collins of the Gayety is offering burlesque fans this week. Not only is the type of entertainment to be judged as among the best seen on the Gayety stage this year, but the entire personnel, down to the "ladies of the ensemble," are entertainers who excel in good comedy, feminine pulchritude and ability in song and dance.

Charles (Red) Marshall and Murray Leonard, one of the Wheel's outstanding comedy teams, headline the first half of the attraction with their own brand of wit and humor. Marshall, in particular, is still that dry-humored fellow who not only looks funny, but is twice as effective when he starts to spiel off in a comedy sequence. Leonard, by the way, renders several song numbers that prove his right to be known as one of the best barytones heard around here for several seasons.

Heading the distaff portion of the bill are Delores Dawn, Ruth Donald and Marie Voe, a trio of female artists who possess more than average ability.

The latter half of the revue is dedicated to the talents of a good score of sepia entertainers headed by Sahji, a dusky-skinned damsel, whose dance numbers compare with those of the sensational Valda, who appeared here recently. Supporting her are a grand lot of performers who more than excel in their Harlem style of entertainment.

*X WASHINGTON: MONDAY, MARCH 28, 1938 15

This Morning

Duce Well Represented in Big Leagues.

Orlando, Fla., March 27.

Within the past week, the Nats have acquired ball players who answer to the names of Giuliani and Bontura, and the fact that they do strikes this department as more than a wee bit significant.

POVICH.

The influx of the Italian ball player into the leagues seems to be a definite trend. Scarcely a team fails to number on its roster at least one athlete of Italian extraction and we doubt if any major club does not have at least one Italian boy being groomed in the minors for future reference.

Time was—before the turn of the century and a couple of decades after it—that the big league line-ups were dominated by the Irish and the Germans, with only a smattering of American names. Professional baseball apparently had a peculiar appeal for the sons of immigrants to America. Anyway, the Delehantys and the O'Connors, the McGraws, Magees, McAleers and Kelleys were famous baseball names as were the Schultes and the Shaefers and the Wagners and Altrocks.

But now it's the Bonuras and the Di Maggios and the Crosettis, Lazzeris and Camillis who are in the ascendancy. Not yet do they outnumber the Irish and the Germans, perhaps, but in another generation, you will see it. And, yes, the Poles and the Liths and the Slavs are beginning to insinuate themselves into the American game.

The Irish and the Germans preceded the Italians into baseball no doubt because they preceded them into America. The great wave of Italian immigration did not begin until after millions of Irish and Germans had come to the United States to seek the more abundant life. And the Italians have the same edge over the Poles, the Liths and the Slavs. In another generation or two, it may be the Italians who will be on the way out of baseball in increasing numbers and the other nationalities who will be on their way in.

Slavs Prominent.

The Slavs have already made a smashing appearance into the game with their Joe Kuhel, their Joe Vosmik, Frankie Pytlak and Johnny Mihalic, and Al Simmons (nee Symanski) long ago set the style for Polish boys. Washington's Joe Krakauskas is a Lithuanian once removed from the old country.

The Germans and Irish who filled the big league rosters 20, 30, 40 years ago were the sons, for the most part, of dads who came to America to seek manual labor. Rarely were they in a position to send their off-spring into professions requiring higher education. The baseball diamonds presented a ready outlet for the lads' spare time. And they developed as ball players.

But with succeeding generations, the German and Irish began to acquire wealth and affluence and position. And they began sending their sons to school, and college and into the professions. The Irish went in heavily for law and politics and the Germans leaned toward merchandising and agriculture. And as they gained position, they were not so amenable to baseball, and German and Irish names began to disappear from the line-ups.

Italians on March.

But these Italians who are now cutting a swathe in the major leagues are, for the most part, lads of a generation only once removed from the old country. They are, perhaps, the sons of the immigrants who have not yet improved their financial rating to a great extent. The same circumstances that shaped baseball as an attractive venture for the Irish and German kids are now directing Italian lads into the game.

And the success of the Italian ball players in the big leagues, which has been no less than remarkable, foreshadows an even greater influx of Italian lads into the game. Even as Joe Louis' sensational rise in the prize ring stimulated a veritable stampede of Negroes into boxing, the feats of DiMaggio and Lazzeri and Crosetti and Bonura can hardly fail to create much the same effect on baseball.

Perhaps in the next generation, or the one after that, when the Italians' position in America is improved, they, too, will pass out of the game in greater numbers than they flew into it. Like the Germans and Irish, they will be seeking for their sons loftier and more genteel stations in life. And then it will be the Poles and the Liths who will take over, even as the Italians are taking over in this decade.

The Jewish Answer.

And if you are asking why there are very few Jewish players in the big leagues, perhaps that can be answered, too. There are not as many Jewish players as Italians for the same reason that white sheep give more wool than black sheep—because there are more white sheep.

But there is, perhaps, another reason, and a better one. Hebrew lads rarely have the time to spend on the sandlots that is allotted to other boys of the same age. While little Pat and Mike and Herman and Giuseppe are out there learning how to play a bad hop, Poppa has probably got little Izzie working in the store helping to keep down the overhead.

Scoring Record.

Marshfield, Wis., March 27 (AP).—Leroy Edwards, former University of Kentucky basketball All-American, set a personal scoring record for himself today. He made 16 field goals and 7 free throws for 39 points as the Oshkosh All-Stars of the Natoinal Pro Basketball League defeated a college All-star line-up, 73 to 48.

AguaCaliente Race Is Won BySeabiscuit

Scores by Two Lengths Over Gray Jack; Wise Fox Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Agua Caliente Race Track, Mexico, March 27.—Seabiscuit, Charles S. Howard's handicap king of 1937, today shook the jinx that cost him his last three races and captured the $12,500 added Agua Caliente Handicap, before a crowd exceeding 20,000. Gray Jack was second and Little Nymph third.

The time for the mile and an eighth on the fast track was 1:50.2.

A 1-to-6 pre-race favorite, Seabiscuit—nosed out in the recent $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap—took the lead early with Gray Jack in closest pursuit, and won by two lengths. The winner paid $2.60, $2.20 and $2.20. Gray Jack paid $2.20 and $2.20 and Little Nymph $3.

Eight went postward in the first renewal of the one-time $100,000 Agua Caliente Handicap (nee Cofforth Handicap).

The Long Run Stable's 7-year-old Marynell was withdrawn this morning.

Amor Brujo, 6-year-old Uruguayan, finished fourth and was trailed by Warfellow, the one-eyed San Luis Rey and his stable mate, Sir Ridgway, and Top Radio. The South American campaigners ran gamely to midway of the stretch, then weakened.

Seabiscuit, ridden by Noel (Speck) Richardson, third substitute jockey since the champion's pet rider, Red Pollard, was injured, drew to a safe lead rounding the far turn and won easily.

E. E. Fogelson's 5-year-old Gray Jack, with W. Leischman aboard, made a game bid for the lead going into the back stretch, but was no match for Seabiscuit. Mrs. R. J. Murphy's Little Nymph, also 5 years old, surprised with her closing burst of speed, and just missed nosing out Gray Jack for second money.

Wise Fox Wins, Pays Backers, $12.40

By the United Press.

Fair Grounds, New Orleans, March 27.—Wise Fox, bettering Bunny Baby by a nose, today won the seventeenth running of the $12,000 added Louisiana Derby and first money of $9,620 for owner A. G. Tarn.

Time was 1:51:1, two-fifths second slower than the track record.

Three lengths behind the leaders was Sir Raleigh, the favorite. He was one length ahead of Sir Ally.

Taking the richest purse in the race since 1929, Wise Fox paid $12.40, $6.20 and $4.00 on $2.00 mutuel tickets. Mrs. E. K. Bryson's Bunny Baby, won $2,000 for second and paid $6.00 and $3.60. Sir Raleigh, the Millsdale Stable entry, won $1,000 and paid $2.80.

The race was 1 mile and one-eighth.

It was a repeat victory for Tarn, whose Rushaway in 1936 set the track mark.

Wise Fox, carrying only 114 pounds under Veteran Johnny Longden, caught Bunny Baby in the last furlong and stretched ahead in the last few yards.

Ridden by R. L. Vedder, also at 114 pounds, Bunny Baby nearly disproved the adage that "fillies don't win derbies." She broke quickly and set the pace for the nine contestants.

The Fox was headed briefly on the back stretch by Feng, Mrs. K. Ramsey's entry.

Bourbon King, Hal Price Headley's Hialeah sensation, carried top weight of 122 pounds and was almost knocked into the infield at the first turn. Thereafter, the King, ridden by Eddie Arcaro, whose performances during the day gave him 56 victories to lead Vedder in the national lists, had plenty of room, but couldn't get in the running.

Rennert Handicap At Pimlico Lure For 40 Nominees

Eleven eligibles to the $50,000 added Preakness were among the 40 thoroughbreds nominated to the fifteenth renewal of the Rennert Handicap to be decided at Pimlico Tuesday, May 3. Those eligible for both events are: Bourbon King, Galapas, Hypocrite, King Pharamond, Battle Jack, Garry, Bull Whip, Dickerville, Stormscud, Cacodemon and Edwin Booth. The Rennert is a 6-furlong dash for 3-year-olds and carries $2,500 in added money.

John Revolta, Sam Snead Tie For Lead in Greensboro Open

Jug McSpaden Drops to Third Place With 137 Total, Three Strokes Behind Leaders; Revolta Adds 66.

By the Associated Press.

Greensboro, N. C., March 27.—Sammy Snead, the long-driving sensation from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., the leading money-winner on the winter and spring golf tour, shot their way into the lead today in the second round of the $5,000 greater Greensboro Open.

Each had a 134 after the first 36 holes. Revolta shot a dazzling five-under-par 66 today to add to the 68 he shot yesterday and Snead, who tied for the lead in the opening round with Harold McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass., added a 68 to his opening round 66.

McSpaden, with an even par 71 today, slipped into third place with a total of 137, three strokes behind the leaders. Five under par yesterday, he was bothered by the breeze today.

Runyan Is Fourth.

Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., was fourth with a 72-67—139 and he was followed by Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, who seems to be striking his stride again, with a 72-68—140.

Behind this pair came Willie Goggin, of San Francisco, the early leader, and Horton Smith, of Chicago, each with a 142.

They were trailed by Bobby Cruickshank, the Richmond (Va.) veteran; Bill Heinlein, of Indianapolis, who burned up the course yesterday; Harry Cooper, of Chicopee, Mass.; Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., and Lawson Little, of San Francisco. Each came up with a 143.

Tomorrow's 36-hole final will shift from Starmount to the Valley Brook course at the nearby Sedgefield Country Club, where par is 70. Officials of the Greensboro Junior Chamber of Commerce announced tonight the tournament has been such a success that it will be repeated next March. The exact dates will be announced shortly by the P. G. A.

Appling Suffers Fractured Leg; Blow to Chisox

Los Angeles, Calif., March 27. Luke Appling, star Chicago White Sox shortstop, suffered a fractured leg today as the Sox defeated the Chicago Cubs, 10 to 9, in an exhibition game. The injury deals a heavy blow to the Sox hopes for the 1938 season, as Appling was one of the hardest and most consistent hitters on the squad.

Appling, who led the American League in batting with a .388 average in 1936, injured his leg sliding into second base on an attempted hit and run play in the seventh inning. Before he went out of the game he had hit a home run.

He was taken immediately to a hospital. Physicians declined to make an estimate of the length of time he would be out of action.

The score:

Les Sumners Wins Table Tennis Title

Len Sumners won the Government employes table tennis championship last night, defeating the defending titleholder, N. Engleberg, in a four-game match at the Washington Table Tennis Courts. The scores were 12-21, 21-19, 21-18, 2-15.

After a short rest Engleberg joined with Sumners to win the doubles crown by conquering H. Berkowitz and Abe Chasanow, 2-11, 19-21, 21-19, 21-12.

In the semifinal single round, Sumners had beaten P. C. De Vries, 21-19, 21-13, 23-25, 9-21, 21-19, and Engleberg had downed Milt Zimmerman, 21-19, 21-17, 21-14.

Wayside Bob Wins.

Baltimore, March 27 (AP).—Wayside Bob, R. D. Roane's brown and white pointer, took top honors in the all-ages stakes of the Anne Arundel County Field Trial Association. Two Rivers Honeyboy (CQ), owned by C. W. Huber, of Wilmington, Del., was second.

Opening Game Tickets Held Until Saturday

Fans holding reservations for the opening baseball game with Philadelphia, April 18, are requested to call for their seats before Sunday, April 2. Washington Ball Club officials have specified that no tickets will be held after Saturday, April 1.

Hubbell, Schumacher Scalp Indians.

By the Associated Press.

Baton Rouge, La., March 27.—Behind three-hit pitching by Carl Hubbel and Hal Schumacher the New York Giants whitewashed the Cleveland Indians today, 6 to 0, to take a 3-1 lead in the clubs' spring exhibition series.

Feller faced the Giants for four innings and, although he fanned four, allowed the first run in the fourth when Joe Moore tripled and scored on a passed ball. Hubbell was better. Lyn Lary and Roy Weatherly hit singles on his first two pitches but he mowed down the next 14 men in order. Schumacher followed and hurled one-hit ball for the last four frames.

The Giants jumped Johnny Allen for four runs in the fifth, with Mel Ott's first homer of the season and Jimmy Ripple's triple doing most of the damage.

Pirates Win Twice.

San Francisco, March 27 (AP).—Pittsburgh's National League Pirates trounced two Pacific Coast League teams today.

The Pirates crossed the bay to Oakland this morning and came back with a 9-to-5 victory. A few hours later they scored a 3-to-0 victory over San Francisco, capturing their exhibition series with the Seals, three games to two.

In the closing game the Pirates were held scoreless until the seventh when a triple by Lucas and a sacrifice by Lloyd Waner brought a score. Two singles and a double in the eighth earned two more runs.

First game—

Archibald Is Favored Over Scibelli Tonight

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Sleek-haired Joey Archibald, Providence's half-pint pugilist, goes to the post against Johnny Scibelli, of Jersey City, tonight in the ten-round feature at Turner's Arena, and figures to hit him often and hard enough to win the decision.

Undefeated in nine previous engagements here and aiming for a championship bout with Sixto Escobar, Archibald will go into action a 9-5 favorite, at least and with an abundance of financial support. Scibelli, as far as local fans are concerned, is an unknown quantity, even though he looked fairly good in a public demonstration Saturday, but Archibald's prowess is a well established fact.

Sky-rocketing to a high place in the fistic firmament since whipping Buddy Grimes for a $75 purse less than a year ago, Archibald is one of the best box-office attractions corraled by Matchmaker Ahearn in years. From that first purse Archibald rose to such high estate he drew approximately $2,000 for knocking out Lou Gevinson.

Slight Chance of Kayo.

Seven of Archibald's last nine opponents have hit the deck, but wagering on a knockout tomorrow night is slight, for Scibelli is a tough lad, able to absorb considerable punishment without visible effect. Scibelli is wide open for a right hand, in which Archibald specializes, but can take a few, and is willing to in exchange for the privilege of getting inside.

The French-Italian is best at infighting, and if he gets close enough to Archibald often enough, we may have an upset as surprising as Abrams' knockout by Jimmy Jones last week. Scibelli can win, make no mistake about that, although he shouldn't and will not, if form holds true. Archibald is no novice at the game. He knows what to do, when and how to do it. He doesn't like to be punched around the tummy too often, however, and that is what should make it a good fight.

First Start As Bantam.

This will be Archibald's first appearance as a legitimate bantamweight, another angle which can not be overlooked, because it may make a big difference. All of his previous engagements were with featherweights and junior lightweights, and he enjoyed pronounced success with them. But, whether he can do as well against a smaller and faster man, or whether his blows will have the same stunning

Engel's Rival May Get Sally Rand For Fan Dance

Nashville, Tenn., March 27 (AP). Dan McGugin, who modestly admits he is one of Sally Rand's fans, announced tonight the famous dancer may open the Southern Association baseball season here April 19, by giving her fan dance right on home plate.

McGugin, chairman of the committee on arangements for the grand opening, figured Nashville's male population would turn out en masse for the event, and that most of their wives would accompany them to see that everything came off, as scheduled.

"If Joe Engel over at Chattanooga can stage a wild elephant hunt on his opening date, as he said he would," McGugin declared, "we can go him one better, and instead of turning the park into a jungle we can turn it into a sort of a night club.

"We've got our civic pride to think of. The way we look at it, it's a civic proposition. The Junior League girls will be asked to participate and we've got a dancing troupe here that does the big apple."

Two More Records Set by Flanagan

Swimming over a 20-yard course, Flanagan broke his own record of one minute 57.5 seconds for 200 yards with 1:56.22 He was clocked 2:07.8 for 220 yards, bettering the old mark of 2:08.6 set by Johnny Weismuller in 1927.

Flanagan's efforts today gave him every free-style record for a 20-yard course for more than 100 meters.

Harris Visualizes Homers as Zeke Makes Last Out

Bradenton, Fla., March 27.—With the Nats needing a run to tie the score today, and their chances fading in the late innings, Zeke Bonura brought a smile to the face of Manager Bucky Harris by flying out to leftfield.

It was a simple catch for Outfielder Roy Johnson and helped the Nats not one whit, but Harris was highly pleased.

Because he visualized that clout by Bonura as a home run if socked at Griffith Stadium. It was a vicious thump to the fence, 391 feet away. Harris is not unware that the left field fence at Griffith Stadium is only 360-odd feet distant from home plate.

Al Simmons' Poor Throw Lets in Run

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Bradenton, Fla., March 27.—Winning everything but the ball game, the Nats dropped a 1-0 decision to the Boston Bees this perfect afternoon. They had the better pitching, made the most hits and clouted for longer distances, but they couldn't stir up a single run.

That run which the Bees scored wasn't anything to brag about, however. It was shockingly unearned and no fault whatsoever of Wes Ferrell's who was pitching for the Nats at the time—in the fifth inning. It was a luck-anointed tally from start to finish and Ferrell could sue for nonsupport on two counts in that fifth.

He could present a fine case against Rightfielder Johnny Stone who encouraged the Bees to go out and get that run by dropping Fletcher's fly ball at the start of the inning. The ball plopped out of Stone's glove as if it was unwanted.

A Bit Later.

A bit later, Ferrell played in some equally bad luck. Al Lopez hit a meek grounder toward third base, but the ball bounded high in the air and delayed it's descent just long enough to permit Lopez to beat it out for a hit, sending Fletcher to second. A sacrifice advanced the pair of runners and the bases were filled after Warstler drew a walk.

When Gilbert English raised a fly ball to Al Simmons in short left field, Ferrell saw no case for alarm, even with a runner on third and only one out. But at this point, Simmons failed him sadly. Aunt Pitty Pat could have thrown Fletcher out at the plate with a half-decent peg, but Simmons merely lobbed the ball home and the winning run was across the plate.

It was a dismal ending for Ferrell who pitched five superb innings against the Bees. After the first two Boston hitters reached base against him in the first inning, he struck out three men in a row to retire the side and of the three hits he did allow while he was on the mound, one was a bunt and another was a short dunker into center field. Wes had something on his fast ball and was pitching away at a great rate.

Bees Get Five Hits.

All told, the Bees collected only five hits—all singles—off Ferrell and Ray Phebus who relieved the big right hander in the sixth. Meanwhile, the Nats were accumulating nine safe blows off two parties named Ira Hutchinson and Richard Errickson, a pair of string-beanish right handers. And two of those hits were doubles—by Travis and Stone.

But when a hit could be translated into a run, or perhaps two, there was no hit forthcoming from the Nats. Big Hutchinson held 'em to eight blows in seven innings, and allowed only one man to reach third base. Young Errickson fresh out of Scranton where he led the N. Y.-Pa. League pitchers last year, gave up only a single hit in the last two innings.

Big Zeke Bonura graced first base in a Washington uniform for the first time today and failed to inspire the Nats despite his voluble chatter. He went hitless in three trips to the plate, but two of his swats were on-the-nose drives directly at the outfielders.

They let Jimmy Wasdell replace Bonura in the late innings, and little Jimmy tried to start something with a sharp single to left in the eighth. He is bowing out of the first base job with a grand flourish, little Jimmy is.

Al Simmons must have been overcome with remorse, or something, after his miserable throw from short leftfield that gave the winning run to the Bees in the fifth inning. Because, on the next play, he contributed the fielding gem of the day—a galloping catch across the foul line on Roy Johnson's swat, which seemed destined to fall safe.

If the Nats by any chance had tied the score in the ninth inning after Ray Phebus had been lifted for Pinch Hitter Taft Wright, the Washington pitcher who would have faced the Bees would have been Goose Goslin. Harris suddenly discovered that

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

New York, Nov. 27.—The great Bambino still dreams of power:

Pussums, a middle-sized, white Spitz dog, looked up at Babe Ruth with appealing, lustrous eyes. She wanted a bite of what the Babe was eating—of what the Babe called "Barkwurst." The Babe was eating small grayish-white sausages which had been cooked in "boilin' beer."

The Babe's attractive, brown-haired wife, Claire, cautioned, "Don't give her anything to eat. She's always begging." So the Babe split a sausage and handed it to the gulping Pussums, defending himself with, "Aw——, this won't hurt her any."

We were sitting in George Herman Ruth's Riverside Drive apartment. Claire calls it the "trophy room." But Mr. Ruth calls it "the bar." They're both right. Because this room with the little round tables and the cushioned replicas of beer kegs for chairs and the walls completely covered with baseball photos serve both purposes.

The Babe, always a colorful figure, was particularly colorful in short, black smoking jacket, trimmed with red—pulled on over a maroon sports jersey that blended well with his weather-beaten muffin face. He had just come in from his daily round of golf and was knocking off a tid-bit before dinner.

* * * *

I asked him what he thought about Tom Meany's magazine piece about the National League being a minor league compared to the American.

The Great Man bit into a slice of pumpernickel bread.

"Well—I dunno—I didn't read it. But from what you say, I'd figure he was right.

"The American League has been ahead of the National League for years, particularly on power," he said. "You see, the National League is still playin' the old Army game of John McGraw and those boys. I mean the sacrifice game. Get a man on base and then move him to the next base. Finally get a run. The American League doesn't play that way generally. In that circuit, when you get a man on base, a fellow steps up to the plate and tries to belt out a home run—scoring two runs instead of a sacrifice."

Mr. Ruth, baseball's all-time home run king who smashed out 60 homers in 1927, continued, "That's it. Power's the thing. And the only National League club that ever seemed to go after power is the Cardinals."

The Babe said, "Yes, and he ought to be able to develop plenty of power. He's bigger than me."

Claire said, "He is not."

* * * *

I tried to side with the Babe because I was fishing for something. I said, "Well he's just as tall as the Babe." Mr. Ruth thanked me silently over his dwindling "barkwurst."

Taking advantage of this meeting of minds, I inquired, "Babe, when are you coming back to baseball?"

"I dunno," he said. "I ain't had any offers, except to go to South America for a baseball tournament. And I ain't goin' there. Looks like I'll just go on playin' golf and goin' to the movies at night or listnin' to the radio."

That's all the great man has been doing since the 1935 season when he quit the beleaguered Boston Braves.

"Why don't you accept a minor league job—use that as a stepping stone, and climb right back into the major leagues in some official capacity?" I asked.

He said, "I won't go down to the minors. I don't have to."

"Well—you're certainly not going to buy into some major league club?" I said.

He said, "Naw, I ain't. I'll never buy into any baseball outfit."

Sport Opens East Season Next Friday

Jockeys, Thoroughbreds Plentiful; Mahoney in Charge of Betting.

Hundreds of horses, including divisions of the Belair Stud and Wheatley Stable, have arrived within the past 48 hours to await the opening of the 1938 Eastern racing season on Friday at Bowie.

General Manager Joseph B. Boyle of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association reports that Supt. Dick Pending has more than 1,500 requests for stalls. As a result, Pending will have to ask numerous horsemen to stable at Laurel and Pimlico and van here on the days they have anything to race.

In addition to the Belair-Wheatley horses, which include Alps, Teufel and Wise Counsel, others that shipped here are Mrs. Willie Robinson, P. C. Randolph, R. A. Breton, A. R. Marshall, F. Waring, J. E. Murphy, E. Mullrenan, H. L. Banners, T. F. Morgan, H. G. Campbell, Mrs. V. Russell, J. M. Bachland, H. L. Stanton, R. C. Hanna, H. E. Yorke, C. H. Robinson and J. E. Hughes.

Among the better-known racing establishments with representatives on hand are Millsdale Stable, John Hay Whitney, Roy Bryson, Alvin Untermyer, A. C. Compton, Ral Parr, Mrs. Emil Denemark, Shandon Farm, Bomar Stable, Howard Bruce, Elwood Sachsenmaier, Brandon Stable, William Ziegler, jr., and Charles Fleischman.

Vanderbilt Horses Ready.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who has close to 50 horses in training at his Sagamore Farm in the Worthington Valley, will van here on days his horses are scheduled to race.

Race Secretary John B. Campbell, who opened his office today, was well pleased with the horsemen's generous response to the stakes to be run here. Campbell attracted 16 nominations for the $2,000 Kindergarten to be run Friday. The $5,000 Rowe Memorial to be run the following day drew 16 nominations. Twenty-seven horses have been named for the $3,500 Bowie Handicap on April 9. The $5,000 Southern Maryland Handicap on April 13, has attracted 28 horses belonging to 19 interests.

Jesse Bennet, custodian of the jockeys' room reports that Sonny Workman, Nick Wall, Jackie Westrope, Wayne D. Wright, Lloyd Knapp, Hilton Dabson, Sammy Renick, Joe Renick, Charlie Corbett, George Seabo, Al Shelhamer, Joe O'Malley, B. Hacker, Johnny Longden, Floyd Smock and Johnny Gilbert would all don silks during the approaching 12 days' sport.

Mahoney Due to Arrive.

Pari-Mutuel Manager Mortimer M. Mahony is due tomorrow from Florida. In his absence, Earl Walden has been setting up the "iron men." The daily double will be offered on the first and second races daily.

The Harry M. Stevens Co. of New York, which has charge of all concessions has greatly beautified it's stands. The work was done under the personal supervision of Joe Stevens, former star outfielder for the Yale University nine. Joe, assisted by Harry Stevens, will handle the concessions here.

Horsemen, who have been working their charges over the strip, report it better than in recent years. Some fast times have been turned in and Supt. Pending has wagered several hats that at least one new track mark will be established before the session ends April 14.

Dear Al: Selections at Tropical Park.

With the Kentucky Derby some seven weeks away, many of the experts are weakening on the chances of Stagehand in the great American classic. Despite the fact that the son of Sickle won the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap, there are many that believe his race was something of a "fluke" and that the 126 pounds he must carry at Churchill Downs will mean a different story. While I'm not ready to pick the Sande-trained colt for the Derby, I hold him in high respect. True, he was getting piles of weight from Seabiscuit and the others in that California race. However, he does hold a decision over them. In fact, when everything is considered, Stagehand did something that even War Admiral hasn't done. He turned back Seabiscuit. The old myth that winter horses can't hold their own with horses brought along gradually for the Derby is the bunk. Stagehand has not been in action since the Santa Anita race and it is unlikely that he will be until the day of the big race. Earl Sande is too smart to try to keep Stagehand in strict training for so long a period. I believe that he will come up to the race in top form. If he does, the race won't even be close. Stagehand is the "come-from-behind" type. Only a massive field will hinder his chances and I have a sneaky feeling that his mere presence will scare many of the owners into keeping their charges in the barn on the big day,

BILL.

First race—Broom Tour, in withe light weight and favored by the short sprint route, appears well placed in the day's opener and with the right ride seems ready to take down the chief award. Stingy and Don Manuel for the place and show. Clocker Mike says to watch out for Blakeen if he gets off the "also eligible" list.

Second race—Dark May may be the right one in this event. Likes the route and has been sharpened for a test of this sort. Julius Caesar and Findon probably are best of the others.

Third race—Pit Terrier appears best of the maiden juveniles scheduled to march postward in this event. Travel Agent and Spanish Dot should be in the thick of contention, however.

Fourth race—Maiden 3-year olds battle in this and I'm going to back the chances of Lourdes. This one couldn't get cheaper company than this. Bar Fly and Doggerel to fill out the money bracket.

Fifth race—Faust gets my call in this sprint. He breaks off the rail and has Keh McCombs for the riding assignment. I see no reason for mistakes. My Kin has speed and is dangerous. Escohigh for the minor award.

Sixth race—Say When, the lightweight of this party, seems to have found the right spot in this sprint. He will have Strange Times, one that runs strangely at times, to beat. Pretty Busy should be along in time to take part of the purse.

Seventh race—Sam Worthy and Centennial are the figure horses in this event. Pepper Patch has been improving and might be ready to take it all at this route.

Klein Beats Macks.

Biloxi, Miss., March 27 (AP).—Chuck Klein's double scoring Heinie Mueller in the last half of the ninth enabled the Phillies to nose out the Athletics, 6 to 5, today and gain a 3 to 1 advantage in their exhibition series betwen the two Philadelphia rivals.

Errors by Finney and Newsome coupled with three singles gave the Phils three runs in the fourth and wiped out an early athletics' lead. The Phils drove Ed Smith from the mound and scored two runs in the sixth but Easterling registered for the A's in the seventh to tie the score.

Mueller and Scharein had three hits each for the winners and Easterling and Finney collected the same number each for the Athletics.

Sarasota, Fla., March 27 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox cashed in on three hits, a walk and a wild pitch to score two runs in the sixth inning today, break up a pitchers' battle and defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 3 to 1, in an exhibition game.

Lefty Grove pitched one-hit, runless ball for the Sox the first three innings, and Big Max Butcher blanked the Bostons with two hits through the first five innings. Luke Hamlin replaced Butcher in the sixth and was tagged for the winning margin.

Altogether, Grove, Fritz Ostermuller, who blanked the Dodgers through the fourth, fifth and sixth, and young Jim Bagby gave the Brooklyns a total of three hits.

Tarf Athletic Club's baseball team invaded Ballston yesterday to deal out a 9-7 defeat to the Ballston A. C.

The feature of the close game was a home run by Bill Payne for the home team. Lefty Brown, Albert Wright, and Tommy Johnson were the batting stars for the winners. Brown hit a homer while Wright delivered three singles in five trips to the plate. Johnson obtained a single, double, and triple in four attempts.

Facts and Faces

Walter (Wasp-waist) Haight, Post racing writer, is a harassed young man these days, what with folk sending him fan mail and 8-year-old son, Raymond, giving him public geography lessons . . . Walter's wailings all started the other evening on the Umbrella Court of the Air when Walter, with little Raymond tagging along, stepped up to be interviewed by Charley Moore . . . Haight's surprise at being asked if he had ever ridden a horse was nothing compared with his "flabbergastness" when Raymond rose on his toes to sigh into the microphone "Poor horse!" . . . This to the muffled laughter of bystanders who looked up and down Walter's elf-like 230-pound stature. But Watter proved himself a forgiving if not wise father a moment later when Moore turned to ask Raymond which are the only two countries in Europe bordering on only one other country . . . after Raymond had answered correctly with Sweden and temporarily faltered, Walter prompted aloud with Norway, wrong of course . . . however, Raymond straightened things almost simultaneously by blurting out Portugal and raising his batting average against the old man to .1000.

And then the blow that broke even Walter's back . . . a letter sent him by a radio listener, perhaps, which carried as a punchline, "Behind The Haight Ball."

Louis' Fight Friday Tops Week's Card

Brown Bomber Defends His Title Against Harry Thomas.

The Brown Bomber will be shooting for his thirty-eighth victory in 39 fights when he takes on Harry Thomas, rugged Minnesota heavyweight in a 15 rounder at Chicago Friday night.

Louis, who knocked out Nathan Mann in three rounds in his last start, will be a prohibitive favorite over Thomas, a courageous battler who does not figure to give the Brown Bomber much more than a good workout. Thomas lasted eight rounds against Max Schmeling before the Teuton knocked him out. Boxing experts, looking ahead to Louis' major title defense against Schmeling in June, thus will have some slight basis on which to make comparisons.

Also appearing on the schedule in over-the-weight bouts are Featherweight Champion Henry Armstrong and Welterweight Monarch Barney Ross.

Armstrong, making his last tune-up appearance before meeting Ross in May for the welterweight title, collides with Lew Feldman, New York veteran, in a 10 rounder at the Hippodrome Wednesday night, while Ross is booked for a 10 rounder with Ernie Schaft, of Minneapolis Friday night at Minneapolis.

Two of the foremost challengers for middleweight honors, Fred Apostoli, of San Francisco, and Glen Lee, of Nebraska, clash in a 15-round return match Friday night at Madison Square Garden. In their first engagement, Apostoli outpointed the Nebraska wildcat.

The program:

The Punch Line . . .

By Lewis F. Atchison.

We read with interest that Maxie Baer has returned to California to cash in on the glory of his convincing victory over Tommy Farr, and prepare for a return bout with Joe Louis. The theory is, we suppose, that appearing as referee at small fight clubs, and in three-round exhibitions will put Max in shape to whip the champion—or at least restore his courage sufficiently to enable him to land one punch.

Max's new-found strength, boxing skill and confidence arises, we are told, from the birth of his son. He can't lose because of the boy. He doesn't want him to grow up thinking his dad was a bum—a commendable spirit, but a lot of plain piffle when you survey the facts coolly and impartially.

What's he going to do when and if he gets into the ring again with Louis—bring the boy along to hold one of Louis' hands while Max beats him with two? Or will the thought of the little fellow lying home in his crib inspire him so he'll walk out and belt Louis with one good right and watch him drop for the count?

Louis, if memory serves correctly, didn't drop from Schmeling's first right, nor the second, nor the third. It took a lot of punching to put the colored boy on the canvas—a lot of good punching. Meanwhile, what will Louis be doing about all of this—standing there taking it? We don't think so. He hits rather hard on his own account, with both hands, and Baer bruises easily.

Max looked great against Farr, but Farr doesn't punch like the champion. He took a good many rights to the head, and left hooks to the same sector and the body, but that was the Farr brand of punching, not Louis'. One good right hand thrown by Louis can do more harm than a dozen of the same variety by Farr. It's simply that one is a potent puncher, and the other a stout-hearted lad with not much power in either mitten. Louis takes a punch well, and gives one better. He'll take all Baer has to offer, then knock him out again, in our humble opinion.

The best thing for Baer to do, if he's really serious about a return bout—remember, he's spouting now because the proposed fight is 18 months away—is to wait until his boy grows up. He'll be of much more help then.

Fred Apostoli takes on Glenn Lee in a return match Friday night at New York, and this time Lee should show the fans how vastly overrated the Frisco fisticuffer really is. Apostoli's defeat at the hands of Young Corbett III was no fluke, while his technical knockout over Freddy Steele was.

He caught Steele when the latter was just recuperating from an illness, out of condition, and with only rusty boxing tools to work with, but if they meet again—and they're bound to, Steele will give him a fancy pasting. The string of knockouts Steele is leaving in his wake reveal that he is fighting his way into condition—the condition he displayed in winning the title.

Mr. Steele is going to be one tough hombre to beat when he catches Apostoli the next time—probably with the title at stake, a little too tough for San Francisco Freddy.

Jimmy Lake, the announcer, was playing Waterloo, Iowa, with a burlesque company years ago, and it looked like a big evening at the box office about a half-hour before the first curtain. Then the town's volunteer fire department rolled screamingly by—and the receipts were exactly $26 for the show.

Andy K.—Thanks for the letter. George Abrams has never fought out of town as a professional.

Vermont to Test Maryland's Veteran Nine at College Park Today

2 Lacrosse Matches on Week's Card

Ohio State Diamonders Here Tomorrow; Trackmen Busy.

By Jack Munhall.

Planning a cold reception for its foe from the North, Maryland University opens its baseball campaign this afternoon at College Park. The prospective victim is the University of Vermont nine, with the party scheduled to begin at 4 o'clock.

This contest with the Bobcats is the first of two this week for the Terp nine and also the official inaugural of Maryland's extensive spring sports program. Tomorrow afternoon, sharing interest with the baseball game with Ohio State will be a lacrosse match between Maryland and its old rival, Swarthmore. It will mark the debut for the Terp ten which has a conational title to defend this season.

On Wednesday, an attractive outdoor track meet will find Maryland's thin-clads competing against a formidable Michigan State squad, homeward bound from the indoor games at West Virginia University. Then on Saturday the busy card is completed as the Terp lacrossemen clash with Mount Washington, a strong club outfit which should determine Maryland's true caliber.

Experienced Nine.

The veteran Terp nine fortified with a regular for every position, but the catching, also will be fully tested by the Cats who proved their strength in defeating Navy's vaunted team.

Win or lose, however, Coach Burt Shipley has announced he will take no unnecessary chances with the arms of any of his pitchers. He will use three fingers each day, splitting the assignment to allow each three innings.

The honor of flinging the first ball has been granted to Charley Weidinger, who also heaves a football with more than passing success. Weidinger will be relieved by Earl Springer, sophomore ace, who will then give way to Bill Steiner, like Weidinger, a 1937 regular.

In the same order, George Wood, Bill Silverman and Carl Ruble, all of last year's squad, are slated to work against the Buckeyes, who have won five of six games.

6 Locals in Line-up.

The remainder of Maryland's line-up against Vermont includes no less than six boys who learned their baseball in local schools. Of most importance to the welfare of the team at this time is Joe Crisafulli, a sophomore catcher from Eastern. Crisafulli has eased Shipley's catching problems by his surprising hitting and throwing during practice games and probably will start the game.

John Boyda and Robert Burns, other aspirants for the backstop job, are expected to see service today and tomorrow.

Besides Crisafulli, the local representatives are Shorty Chumbris, short stop, Lefty Chumbris, right field, and Bill Bryant, center field, all from Central; Waverly Wheeler, third base, from Tech and Eddie Johnson, second base, from Bethesda-Chevy Chase. Completing the regular line-up is George Knepley, a great basketball player as well, who plays first base.

At this premature appraisal Maryland seems to have a hard-hitting, well-balanced team; one which may compile its finest record in recent years. The infield of Wheeler, Chumbris, Johnson and Knepley is an exceptionally strong defensive unit while Surgent and Bryant supply plenty of power in the outfield.

Fairfax Show Heads Named

Five Washingtonians on General Committee.

Thomas DeLashmutt, of Arlington, Va., heads the general committee in charge of the Fairfax Hunt's annual horse show scheduled at the show grounds in Fairfax, Va., Friday and Saturday, April 29-30.

Assisting Mr. DeLashnutt on the horse show committee are George Benoit, of Fredericksburg, Va; George Rothwell Brown, Arthur Godfrey, Reed Thomas, J. A. Wheeler, David L. Wickens, all of Vienna, Va.

Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming, jr., Mrs. Laird Dunlop 3d, Christine Ekengren, N. Stuart McDonald, jr., Lisle A. Smith, all of Washington, D. C.

W. Carroll Hunter, of Falls Church, Va.

William McClellan, of Alexandria, Va.

Murray Kanner, local heavyweight, returns to the ring after a prolonged lay-off following his knockout at the hands of Buck Everett, meeting Jim Swimmer, in a six-round semi-final. This looks like an above par match on paper.

In the other prelims Stumpy Jacobs, of Richmond, tangles with Bill Temes in another six; Johnny Gilley, of Baltimore, faces Tommy Ricco, of Camden, in a third six, and Al Dintaman opens the show in a four with Chester Rubey, of Baltimore.

all his other pitchers had dressed and ordered Goslin to warm up for hurling duty. The Goose was doing that with great vigor when the game ended. All of which recalls that Goslin was some shucks as a pitcher in the South Atlantic League before he turned outfielder.

Young Angelo Guiliani made his debut behind the bat for the Nats when he relieved Rick Ferrell in the sixth inning. He tossed out the first man who tried to steal and then made a wild throw in an attempt to nip a second stealing attempt. He grounded out and walked in two times at bat, but showed some speed on the bases, a rarity among catchers, especially Washington catchers.

The Nats moved to Tampa tonight to await their game with the Cincinnati Reds tomorrow when Monte Weaver and Ken Chase will do the pitching.

3 Eagles, Hole-in-One Top Day's Links Card

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A hole in one at Beaver Dam and eagle deuces on long par four holes at Manor and Congressional featured another heavy days play on the city's score of golf courses yesterday. Army and Navy, East Potomac, Kenwood and Washington reported the heaviest play of the year.

BEAVER DAM.

A. E. Bodnar joined the ace makers' brigade by sinking his tee-shot on Beaver Dam's fourteenth hole, measuring 154 yards.

Playing with his son, Bodnar's spade-mashie shot hit on the edge of the green and trickled into the cup for his initial ace.

MANOR.

H. G. Wood and Alton Pratt divided the day's honors at the Norbeck course, Wood performing the rare feat of scoring a two on the 403-yard fourteenth hole. Playing with T. N. Beavers, A. L. Alderman and W. J. Peters, Wood's 4-iron second shot hit short of the pin and found its way into the cup.

Pratt duplicated the occurrence by holing a 5-iron second shot on the par 4 sixteenth hole, in company with Billy LaBille and two other members of the four golfing Pratt brothers, Kenneth and Dan.

Eddie Stevens, assistant pro, playing one of his first 18-hole rounds of the season, matched Harry Pitt's 3 over par 73, but Stevens and Ray Fleming bested Pitt and Max Taylor by a 2 and 1 margin in a four-ball match.

CONGRESSIONAL.

A few hours after Dr. R. A. Kelly and his greens committee decided to make Congressional's eighth hole a par 4 instead of par 5, Fred Whalen had the honor of putting an eagle 2 on the club's all-time ringer score.

Playing with H. A. Mihills, Louis Speiss and H. Worcester, Whelan holed a full 3-iron shot on the hole measuring over 400 yards.

Clagett Stevens, former assistant pro at Congressional and now mentor at the Ponta Vedra course in Jacksonville, Fla., paired with Billy Shea to trim Roger Peacock and Claude Rippy by a 4 and 3 margin.

Stevens had a 72 to pace the individual medals, playing the left ten holes in 1 under par with a birdie on the ninth and nine consecutive pars on the back nine. Peacock was next with a 75.

ARGYLE.

Ray Lawrenson, A. B. (King) Cole and Phil Brousseau went on a scoring spree on Argyle's tricky par three-fourth hole yesterday, playing the hole in 2 under par despite a penalty stroke.

Lawrenson's tee shot was in the ditch on the 120-yard number, and after taking a stroke penalty he chipped in the cup some 35 feet away. Then Brousseau, whose tee shot was some 8 feet from the cup, knocked in the putt for a birdie two and Cole did likewise from half the distance. Charles Sutphin was the other member of the foursome.

KENWOOD.

Levi Yoder and George Tew handed Assistant Pro Al Jamison and Dr. Parks a 2 and 1 setback yesterday, with Yoder pacing the foursome despite a flurry of three-putt greens.

COLUMBIA.

Harvey Johnson, Georgetown links ace; Capt. H. M. Turner, and Fred McLeod each played 36 holes at Columbia yesterday, with Johnson continuing his low-scoring spree with a 73 and 74 over the wind-swept layout.

Johnson and Tommy Webb bettered McLeod and Turner in the morning while Harvey took Capt. Turner for a partner in the afternoon to down McLeod and Dr. Webb.

EAST POTOMAC.

INDIAN SPRING.

A testimonial dinner for George Diffenbaugh, professional who will leave for his new post at the Roanoke, Va., Country Club within two weeks, has been set for April 6 at the Indian Spring Club.

A new board of governors has also been appointed at the Four Corners course, of Dr. A. Thomas Utz, Harry Bachman, Arthur Urban and Tom Belshe.

Cox Added To Mat Card

Kansan Signs to Meet Henry Graber.

With Princess Baba, pretty daughter of the white Rajah and Ranee of Sarawak, making a personal appearance as chief cheer leader for Gregory, European light-heavyweight champion, Cox will try to regain his following in a special 30-minute bout against Henry Graber, German-American. Dynamite Joe hasn't appeared at the Arena in some five months.

Casey, recognized as world's champion by the Bowser circuit, faces the ever-menacing Garibaldi, of the Dusek circuit, in a one-fall-to-a-finish title bout. It will be Casey's first appearance at the Arena since he won the crown from Louis Thesz last month in Boston.

Promoter Turner announced that he is trying to arrange for Princess Baba and her handsome husband-grappler to come to town tomorrow as his guests. Gregory is unbeaten in European and American competition and is gunning for Jesse James' lightheavyweight title.

Revolta in	343	453	434	—33—66

Revolta picked up two birdies on the first round and three on the last. Snead heard them sing three times on the outgoing nine and three times coming home.

The best Victor Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., who won the historic North and South Open at Pinehurst earlier in the week, could do was a 76 which virtually puts him out of the running.

Jeff Williams, athletic director at George Washington High School, is seriously ill of blood poisoning at his Alexandria home. The infection has settled in his nose and his condition is dangerous, according to attending doctors who have ordered an operation to be performed tomorrow.

White Plains to Meet Eastern in Tourney

Local Interhigh Champion Draws Strong N. Y. Five for Its Opening Test in Eastern States Basketball Tournament.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Glen Falls, N. Y., March 27.—Eastern High School, District interhigh champion, will oppose White Plains (N. Y.) High School in its opening round test in the Eastern States basketball tournament which opens here Thursday.

Competing against strong teams from New Jersey and New York for one of the prized schoolboy crowns, the Washington lads are scheduled to play on the opening night's card.

Other pairings for first night games, released by Ralph Knight, tournament chairman, pit Brown Prep, defending champion of Philadelphia, against Lawrencesville (N. J.) Prep; Vincentian Institute, of Albany, N. Y., against St. Mary's Academy, Glen Falls champion.

Eastern in meeting White Plains will face one of the strongest fives in the East. The New Yorkers hold the Westchester interscholastic championship and Westchester County open title and last year advanced to the finals of this tournament before bowing to Brown Prep.

Another outstanding team is Atlantic City High School, winner of 15 straight games in which it averaged 40 points a game.

The victors of the two games in the first bracket on the opening night card will oppose on the second night and the winners of the second bracket will also face the same night. On the third and final night the finals and also the consolation tourney will be held.

During the stay of the visiting teams, all theaters and clubs of this city will observe open house. Several social functions arranged by private families will be held to honor the visitors. The Rotary and Kiwanis clubs will jointly give a luncheon Thursday for players, coaches and officials. And on Saturday night all tournament awards will be presented at a banquet.

Officials for the tournament include Charley Kaulfuss, John Timmons, Warren Williams and John Cassidy.

St. Xavier Five Wins Catholic Team Court Title

Cicago, March 27 (AP).—A St. Xavier team of Louisville, Ky., thwarted two years ago in an attempt to successfully defend its 1935 National Catholic High School basketball honors as sophomores, came back tonight as seniors to win the fifteenth annual event.

However, it was a sophomore they had to thank. It was Paul Miller who set off a third-quarter attack that brought a 31-22 victory over the stubborn host school, Loyola Academy.

Miller's nickname is "Blank," but when Coach Bob Schuhmann called on him to replace Forward Bill Gates with St. Xavier trailing 18 to 4, he shot anything but blanks. With less than two minutes of the period remaining, Miller hit two field goals.

Katherine Rawls Wins Two Races

Coral Gables, Fla., March 27 (U.P.). Katherine Rawls, United States woman swimming champion, scored two individual victories today to give the Miami Beach Swimming Club a commanding lead in the annual Florida A. A. U. meet.

Miss Rawls won the 100 and 220 yard free styles for 10 of her team's 24 points. Her time in the 220 was 2 minutes 39.5 seconds, 2.1 seconds better than the State record she made last year.

District Fencers Win Foils Crown; Lt. Howard Leads

Lieut. James Howard, U. S. N., of the Washington team, was high scorer of the round robin bouts, winning 15. Other members of the Washington team are William Colbun and Martin Garvey.

The Baltimore Y. M. H. A. was awarded second place after it tied with the Washington Fencers "B" team with 23 points each. The judges decided to break the ties by awarding the placing of the team with the least number of touches. The Y. M. H. A. had 164 touches against Washington's 175.

Fourth place went to the Baltimore Y. M. C. A. with 22 points. The Washington Fencers "C" team won fifth place with 19 points, and Johns Hopkins University scored 15 points for sixth place.

The various teams' members fought 280 individual bouts today. The Washington club, sponsors of the affray, said they will hold sabre championships in about a month. The Annapolis Fencing Club, not participating today, won the epee bouts last month in the tournament.

Providence Wins.

New Haven, Conn., March 27 (U.P.). The Providence Reds defeated the New Haven Eagles, 6-3 here tonight in the final game of the International American League hockey season.

Going Down to Sea With Phoebe E., of Washington, D. C.

By Walter Haight.

Spring and the sight of men scraping hulls and painting decks always recalls the great marine tragedy of my childhood.

HAIGHT.

I was the captain, gruff of voice and strong of will, of the good ship Phoebe E., as fleet a vessel as ever scudded along on a three-quarter breeze. I was the crew, that trimmed the sails and swabbed the decks of this trim and sturdy craft.

Even when she began to grow on the cellar work bench—only a keel and side beams that made her resemble a centipede lying on its back—I sailed her, in my dreams, along coasts lined with cannibals and ahead of great sea monsters with gaping mouths. When arms were tired from passing tools and eyes were sleep-filled from watching my older brothers shape her bow, I was tucked in my bed.

If you happened along the shore of Cape Sleepytime, you would have seen Phoebe E., her sails reefed because of the gale and her captain stripped to the waist, going into a starboard tack on the first league of our nightly journey across endless waters.

From cigar boxes, tomato cans, bits of brass, parts of sheets and pieces of broomsticks was molded more than a play boat—to a boy of 10, something with a soul.

My mother cut and pleated the sails for the shiny booms. My father whittled and gilded the figurehead of Neptune for the prow.

Finally she was shipshape—a thoroughbred from the tip of her bowsprit to the end of her rudder. In gold letters across her stern was "Phoebe E., of Washington, D. C."

We took her down to the sea—my "sea" at Colonial Beach, where, on a straight line the water stretches through the Potomac, into Chesapeake Bay and on to the Atlantic Ocean.

The Phoebe E. sailed!

With her mainsail, topsail and her two jibs catching the breeze, she leaned to her task, ripples lapping from her bow and foam surging in her wake.

I was the boy with a boat. My family shared my joy.

Tired as I was, sleep didn't come to me quickly that night. The moon was high over Cape Sleepytime before I hauled anchor for my dream cruise that night and I had tied up the sails and sculled ashore before sunrise.

The family was asleep when I slipped on my overalls, picked Phoebe E. up from beside the tree, where I had left her the night before, and I carried her to the shore. There was an off-shore breeze—southwest. A good wind for sailing—calm on my side of the river.

I hoisted her sails and set her rudder. I placed her on the water and pushed her out where the breeze began to ripple the surface. I pointed her bow toward the open water. Her sails filled. She was under way!

In the shallow water I hopped along, following her. She slanted away under the pressure of the wind—a beautiful sight.

The Phoebe E. gained momentum. She was sailing her best. I tried to run after her. The water became deeper. She was yards away from me now, doing the only thing she knew—sailing, sailing.

I realized that my boat, my Phoebe E., was headed for the open sea. I saw our rowboat tied to a stake. I released it and jumped in, grabbing the oars in the same motion. Far out, now, passed the fishnets the Phoebe was still forging along, picking up speed as she drew away from the shoreline that had sheltered the breeze.

I was frantic. Each time I paused at my task of trying to gain on the little craft, she appeared to be farther away. Finally, I knew that I could not catch her. I laid down the oars and watched with heavy eyes as her hull disappeared over the horizon.

She became smaller and smaller, then just a speck, and finally that faded into the line that separates the sky from open water.

That night my mother consoled me. She said that somewhere, sometime the Phoebe E. would make some other boy happy.

But I like to believe that the Phoebe E. sailed through the Virginia Capes—on to the sea—and is out there now bucking the heavy swells. And perhaps, sailing past cannibals and sea monsters.

General Electric 1937 Orders, $379,273,619, Are 28% Above 1936.

Detroit, March 27.—In the pamphlet report of Chrysler Corporation, which will be submitted to stockholders at the annual meeting here on April 19, K. T. Keller, president, says that last year the corporation sold 1,158,518 passenger and commercial vehicles. Total sales value was $769,807,839.11 and the net profit after all charges was $50,729,211.40, equivalent to $11.66 per share of common stock outstanding.

Cash and marketable securities at the end of the year were $48,313,-575.87 and during the year net current assets increased $9,065,005.67 and during the year net current assets increased $9,065,005.62 to $74,-064,816.80. In various forms the corporation's taxes for the year were $40,216,742.38.

"New models introduced in October were well received," says Mr. Keller, "but beginning about the middle of November, there was a precipitous decline in the demand for motor vehicles, from which there has as yet been no material recovery. Operations necessarily have been sharply curtailed and steps were taken promptly by your management designed to bring both inventories and expenses into conformity with these changed conditions.

"The business outlook for the immediate future remains obscure but the organization has had previous experience with adapting itself to changing conditions and faces today's problems with confidence in its ability to meet them."

General Electric.

Schenectady, N. Y., March 27 (AP).—General Electric Co. received orders amounting to $379,273,619 in 1937, an increase of 28 per cent over $296,748,219 in 1936, the company stated today in its pamphlet report for the year. Net sales billed totaled $349,739,514, or 30 per cent more than billings of $268,544,587 in the previous year.

Net income for 1937 amounted to $63,546,762, equal to $2.21 a share on capital stock. This compared with $43,947,166 in 1936, equal to $1.52 a share.

Inventories as of December 31 were reported at $93,767,631, less reserves, compared with $60,049,009 at the end of 1936. In connection with the increase in inventories the company stated:

"The larger amount of orders received in the early part of 1937, including orders for heavy machinery requiring upwards of a year for completion for which raw materials requirements were purchased as soon as the orders were received, in accordance with company practice, accounted principally for the substantial increase."

Sturman President Of Hiram Walker, Inc.

Peoria, Ill., March 27.—Everett N. Sturman has become president, and Carleton Healy, vice president, of Hiram Walker, Inc., the United States company selling products of Hiram Walker distilleries, which are located at Peoria, Ill., Walkerville, Ontario, and three points in Scotland.

Mr. Sturman has been general sales manager, and before joining Hiram Walker was vice president of George A. Hormel Co., meat packers. Mr. Healy has been sales promotion manager.

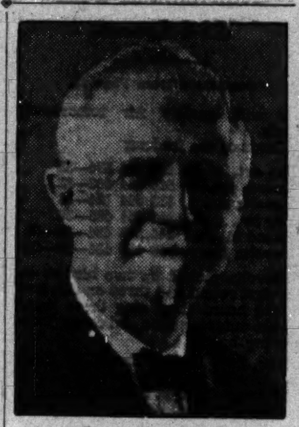
Slump Spreads Over the World; U.S. Holds the Key, Babson Says

Germany, Scandinavia and South Africa Among the Few Bright Spots; Foreign Trade Essential to Our Prosperity, He Declares.

By Roger W. Babson.

Babson Park, Fla., March 27.—Business abroad is slow just as it is here in North America. Britain, France, Netherlands, and the United States are the heaviest sufferers. Declines in other nations are merely echoes of the sharp slumps among these four nations. Busiest areas now are South Africa, Germany and Scandinavia.

Peace and prosperity without good foreign trade is impossible either in America or in Canada. Millions of jobs depend on sales of our goods abroad. The Saskatchewan wheat farmer, the Texas cotton planter, the Michigan automobile worker, and the Massachusetts mill hand fail to realize this—yet it is absolutely true. We must "give and take" if we want to have "good times" at home and if we want to relieve the economic pressure which makes aggression possible abroad. That's why I am 100 per cent behind Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade program! It's also the reason why I keep a check on business overseas so that I can occasionally give readers a "words-eye" view of foreign conditions.



Roger W. Babson.

Great Britain.

A delayed break in business is in progress. Stocks have been sliding downward since early 1937, and are now at the lowest point in five years. If it were not for the gigantic arms program, business might be as bad as it is here. The passing of the peak of the building boom and the slowing down of ocean shipping are adding to the British slump. Our 1938 exports to Great Britain, barring munitions, will show a sharp loss over the 1937 figures.

British Commonwealths.

Australia, New Zealand and Canada are now feeling the shock of the stock market and business slumps in the United States and Great Britain. The break in commodity prices has hit hard other Empire members such as Nigeria, East Africa, Egypt, India. Outstanding Dominion today is South Africa, where the gold boom is still on. As a whole, our 1938 foreign trade with the British Dominions will show a smaller drop than that with the average country.

France.

Huge public expenses plus high manufacturing costs, because of the 40-hour week, are wrecking French business. Industrial activity and stock prices are drifting downward while living costs and unemployment are creeping forward. The weakness of the franc may force further marking down of the closely allied Swiss, Belgium and Dutch currencies. This would be the starting-gun for another race to devalue world currencies with a resultant blow to international trade. France is one of the economic sore spots of the world today.

Germany and Austria.

Business in both the "Fatherland" and her new subsidiary is excellent. Activity is double the low levels of 1932 and 1933. Stock prices on the Berlin Bourse, furthermore, have been moving upward against the world trend but Germany's financial reserves are about exhausted. Hence the annexation of Austria with her gold and raw material resources is actually bullish. There is less danger of immediate war now than at any time since Hitler's rise to power. Poland and Hungary made big strides ahead in 1937, but the current recession has slowed down activity in Czechoslovakia.

Scandinavia.

Business in Sweden, Norway and Denmark is pretty closely tied up with that of England and the United States. Consequently these three countries have felt a slackening in the advance of industrial output since last fall. They are, however, still far above the world average of activity. The weakness in commodity prices and the drop in international shipping are the worst blows. Of the three countries, Denmark feels the recession most severely while Sweden is still a boom country. The way these nations conduct themselves economically and politically is an example for the rest of the world.

Mediterranean Countries.

Italy is a very busy, but a very poor country today. Unemployment has been almost eliminated, but workers are badly paid. Taxation is enormous and the lira—the national currency—is weak. Abyssinia is a big drain. Il Duce is pushing a "self-sufficiency" policy but Italy has even fewer raw materials to work with than Germany. Mussolini, like Hitler, is headed for economic chaos. Meanwhile, Spain continues to impoverish and ruin herself. Portugal and Greece, however, are two bright spots.

South America.

Commodity prices control the prosperity of our Southern neighbors. Hence the price smash in international products, such as coffee, beer, cotton, copper, and wheat, means that the 1937 "boom" will not be repeated this year. After three years of steadily improving conditions, South America will mirror the recession going on in England and the United States. Best trading prospect among the leading countries is Argentina. My feeling is that the biggest recent development in South America is the new dictatorship in Brazil. The "fascist" idea has crossed the Atlantic!

Japan and China.

The China adventure is a big drain on Tokyo, but she is standing up well under the strain. Because of the war, it is almost impossible to determine true business conditions. The increasing restrictions on foreign exchange and the decline in stock prices indicates, however, that she has tackled a big job. One thing is certain—both countries will endeavor to buy less of our goods in the future than in the past. Japan will get much of the raw cotton for her textile mills from the fields of North China rather than from Texas, and she will attempt to crowd us out as China's big merchant. Yet there is a possibility that an awakened China may give us sufficient new business to more than offset these losses.

Depends on U. S.

The key to this entire situation today is the United States. Last year we accounted for one-ninth of all world trade. Our demand and consumption will have a powerful influence on the world trend of commodity prices. The fortunes of many economic arenas around the globe depend on these prices. If a strong pick-up takes place in North America, world recovery can survive the bad conditions in France and elsewhere. I believe that such a recovery may be ahead. Surely a world spiritual revival could bring it about.

Steel Production Advances to 35%

Cleveland, March 27 (AP).—Demand for steel continues to improve slowly, the magazine, Steel, said today. Viewed as a severe handicap, however, was the inability of the automotive railroad industries to take any considerable part of their ordinary tonnages usual at this time of the year.

Some railroad needs were reported breaking through the resistance caused by diminished income and orders for cars, locomotives, and rails have been placed in a small way.

With increased operations at seven steel-making centers and only one decline, the national operating rate last week rose 3 points to 35 per cent, the level predicted for the end of March. This is the highest rate since the week of November 20.

Anaconda Profits Up to $3.62 a Share

New York, March 27 (AP).—Anaconda Copper Mining Co. and subsidiaries reported today 1937 net income of $31,387,861 after charges, but before deduction for depletion of metal mines, equal to $3.62 a share of capital stock. This compared with 1936 net income of $15,881,829, or $1.83 a capital share.

Copper output during the year set a new record and topped by 4.9 per cent the previous peak in 1929. Total production, after deducting purchased ores and metal treated for others, amounted to 843,622,162 pounds, a jump of 52.6 per cent over 1936.

Gold production from company mines totaled 45,827 ounces and output of silver amounted to 8,535,455 ounces.

Senate Group Indorses Amendment by Ballot

By the Associated Press.

A Senate Judiciary sub-committee Saturday approved the proposal of Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, for amending the Constitution by direct popular vote. To become effective, the plan would have to obtain approval of two-thirds of the House and Senate and be ratified by conventions in three-fourths of the States.

Three Plans of Play.

The problem whether or not to draw trumps before establishing a side suit is perhaps the greatest dispenser of headaches in the game of contract. Yet in every hand there is definite indication as to whether the trumps should be drawn, or left at large until outside tricks have been established. Consider the various methods of playing the following hand:

North, dealer.
Match-point duplicate.

	♠ A K J ♡ Q 5 ◇ K 6 4 ♣ A K 9 8 2
♠ 8 6 4 ♡ J 10 9 3 ◇ Q 10 8 7 ♣ 10 6	North West East South	♠ 7 3 ♡ A K 8 6 ◇ 4 2 ♣ Q J 5
	♠ Q 10 9 5 2 ♡ 7 ◇ A 9 5 3 2 ♣ 7 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

In a seven table duplicate game, widely divergent results developed on this hand. The contract was the same at all tables and the opening lead and continuation were also identical, namely two rounds of hearts. But the various declarers, after ruffing the second heart, took different views of the situation.

Four declarers, all so-called average players, drew the outstanding trumps. Then, with only one trump left in the South hand, they led a diamond to the king and a diamond back to the ace. With East failing to the second round, they awoke to the unpleasant realization that their contract was now hopeless.

West had two diamond stoppers and declarer's lone trump could not stem the avalanche of hearts.

Two more experienced declarers, recognizing the danger of finding a bad diamond division, drew only two rounds of trumps, then laid down the king and a low diamond. Now the bad break was not disturbing. The ace won and another diamond was returned. As it happened West had the third trump and, by leading it, could prevent declarer from ruffing a diamond. But this merely resulted in holding declarer to his contract since the concession of another diamond trick established the fifth diamond.

The crux of this play had been that, by holding a trump in dummy, declarer had guarded against being ruffed down by another heart lead.

Only one declarer in the room saw all the possibilities of the hand, and he ended up with an extra trick. He ruffed the second heart and led only one spade to dummy, then cashed the ace and king of clubs and ruffed a club with a high spade. He led another trump to dummy's jack, and ruffed another club with the spade queen, thus establishing dummy's fifth club. Now, with no more trumps in his hand, he led a diamond to the king and drew the outstanding trumps with dummy's ace. He then cashed the good fifth club and his own ace of diamonds, conceding only one diamond trick in addition to the heart lost on the opening lead.

THURSDAY, MARCH 31—
ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF FRAME BUNGALOW, FIVE ROOMS AND BATH, NOT-AIR HEAT, NO. 4830 HAYES STREET NORTHEAST.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in Liber No. 6784, folio 530, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises, on THURSDAY, THE THIRTY-FIRST DAY OF MARCH, 1938, AT TWO-THIRTY O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Lot 114 in combination made by The Municipal Improvement Co., Inc., of Lots 55 and 56 in Square 5149 in "Hampton Heights," as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber 36 at folio 54. Subject to the right of redemption by the maker of the aforesaid deed of trust, her heirs and assigns, within a period of sixty days from the date of sale, not excluding Sundays and holidays, as provided in said deed of trust.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, balance in equal installments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser payable in one and two years, with interest at 8 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semi-annually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $300.00 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within ten days from expiration of redemption period, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

Bob Burns Says—

I wish these foreign countries would settle their disputes and settle down. I'm afraid if we keep on hearin' so much about their troubles over there, It's gonna get us nervous on this side, too. People are a whole lot like chickens. They'll go along quietly in a bunch, pickin' up corn but the minute they get excited, they all scatter out.

I went to get a job down home one time, and the merchant says, "I hope you'll stay with me—the last fella I had on this job stayed 43 years and quit."

I says, "What did he quit for?" and the merchant says, "Well, he was one of them nervous, excitable fellas that wanted to be on the 'Go' all the time."

D. C. Foursome Takes Virginia Bridge Trophy

By Marian H. Barre.

The Schwarzchild Brothers' trophy for team championship in the Old Dominion contract bridge tournament fell to the Washington foursome of Mrs. A. P. Stockvis, Mrs. M. R. West, W. M. McIntyre and Al Roth in the final session of the team match played at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria last night. It was the third championship captured by District players in a three-day program that included four events.

Mrs. Stockvis and Roth also won the mixed pair event. The winners had 41½ boards, a margin of 4 boards over Harold Karp, Dr. L. R. Lord, Louis Newman, and Jack Shore. This quartet is an inter-city partnership; Karp and Lord are from Baltimore, Newman is a Washingtonian and Shore comes from New York. Newman made second place in two events on successive days.

Third place in the team game went to another local team, Dr. A. J. Steinberg, J. D. Granger, A. L. Westrich, and H. R. King. They won 35 boards. Sixteen teams enrolled in the event played through two grueling sessions, starting at 11:30 yesterday morning.

The open pair championship was concluded late Saturday night but scores were not computed until yesterday. Mrs. H. E. Latter and Miss Frances Jacoby, both of Wilmington, Del., defeated 29 seeded pairs who survived the qualifying round and scored the first feminine victory in Old Dominion open pairs. The winners made 290 match points which gave them a lead of 1½ points over Louis Newman, manager of the Washington Whist Club, paired with Jack Shore, of New York. There was a drop of over 20 points between the runner-up and C. E. Hepburn and A. E. Goodman of the Philadelphia outfit, who finished third. Goodman is one of veteran duplicate stars of the country. Dr. and Mrs. L. W. Lord, of Baltimore, ranked fourth. This pair had entered the finals with the highest carry-over score. Sixth place was the best showing for an all-Washington partnership; this went to W. M. McIntyre and Al Roth. J. W. Hussey and J. G. Stone, another local pair were seventh.

A special two-section game was run simultaneously with the championship. Twenty-two pairs competed in the Mitchell section, 12 in the Howell game. Winners in the first section were Lewis Tubbs and L. D. Johnson, of the Arlington Bridge League, north-south, and C. C. McDonnell and Comander W. A. Corley, east-west. L. R. Watson, jr. and Tom Hamlin won the Howell section; Dr. A. J. Steinberg and A. L. Westrich were runners-up. Both pairs are local players.

Auto Interior After Collision

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Alexander Brailovski in an all-Chopin piano recital Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Program: Polonaise in F sharp minor, Mazurek in D major, Nocturne in D flat major, Ballade in G minor, Sonata in B minor, Fantasia-Impromptu in C sharp minor, Valse in E flat major, Eccossaises in D major and D flat major, Polonaise in A flat major.

Despite the counter-attraction of a flawless spring day, Alexander Brailovski drew a large audience to his Chopin recital yesterday afternoon in Constitution Hall, and aroused no small amount of admiring applause with the technical ease and brilliance of his playing. There were many invitations for him to interrupt his formal program with extra numbers, but his compliance with these requests was reserved until the end.

The ruggedness which characterized Brailovski's pianistic style a few years ago has been considerably subdued, and this taming process has been all to the advantage of his interpretations. His dynamic range is as prodigious as ever, but it is used with more discrimination. From his strength there is emerging lyricism which one hopes will increase, for his splendid technical equipment needs the suffusing warmth of poetic emotion. His skill enables him to simulate impetuosities of temperament, but the real interpretative ardor is not yet incandescent.

Judging from his approach to the compositions he played yesterday, it is permissible to wonder why he is specializing in Chopin. With that poet of the piano he came into sympathetic communion only in his readings of the D flat major Nocturne and the slow movement of the B minor sonata. Elsewhere, as far as one auditor was concerned, he dealt only with the surface of the music, with the grace of the contours and the scintillance of the ornamentation.

One missed the quality of imagination which alone can bring out the harmonic subtlety, the delicacy of poetic suggestion and the mordidezza which are of the essence of Chopin's music. There was no lack of vigor in the dramatic projections, no want of light touch for the moments of reverie and no failure of dexterity in phrasing, but one listened, for the most in vain, for the authentic accents of the composer. There was much to commend in the execution, but little to cherish in the memory.

Allowance must always be made for an artist's mood, for there are many things which may interfere with the rapport between interpreter and composer. Possibly Brailovski was not completely in his vein, not as eloquent as he can be. Be that as it may, as a revelation of Chopin's spirit, the recital was disappointing.

The Augustana College Choir, of Rock Island, Ill., appeared last night in an unusual concert at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation under the direction of Prof. Henry Veld. This concert was under auspices of the Minister of Sweden, Commission of the Landing of the Wollmar Bostrum; the Tercentenary Swedes on the Delaware, of which Senator Joseph Guffey, of Pennsylvania, is chairman; the Augustana Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church of the Reformation.

Through a careful selection of numbers and a splendid interpretation, Prof. Veld has developed a concert program which is free from any monotony which too often characterizes a capella work. Further insurance against any such lack of variety was estabished by separation of female and male voices for parts I and II of the concert. The ladies (Jenny Lind Chorus) sang with an appearance of ease and freshness which characterized their softest pianissimos in "The Shepherdess' Sunday," by Bull, as well as their vibrant fortissimos in Rachmaninoff's "Floods of Spring."

The Wennerberg Chorus, consisting of the male voices, was outstanding in "Halsning till hemlandet," by Kromer and "Nu Herrans dag det ar" by Kreutzer, where a well-balanced ensemble was enriched by use of the Swedish words. Brynolf Lundholm accompanied both the Jenny Lind chorus and the Wennerberg chorus.

Parts III and IV consisted entirely of a capella singing, which featured three double choruses, the outstanding number of which was "Adoramus Te Jesu Christe," by Handl. It was apparent that there existed a musical understanding between the director and the singers, because the attacks and releases were exact, the shading finely and effectively worked out and the intonation was excellent. The chorus reached its climax with the Finale from the motet "Sing Ye to the Lord" by Bach. The sopranos were especially good through the a capella singing. The tenors sang with ease and richness almost without exception.
